The Princes to Hold Aloof for the Present—Candidates for the Assembly—Elections Monday—The State of Siege to Cease on Monday.

PARIS, June 9.—The decree ordering the supplementary elections to fill the vacant seats in the Assembly, is expected to-morrow. The Gaulois de France says the Princes have promised not to take their seats as Deputies during the existence of the present Assembly, and not to allow their sons to become candidates. M. FORCADE-LAROQUETTE will stand for the Assembly in the Department of Lot-et-Garonne, and his election will probably not be contested. ROUHER, GUEROULDEN and HAUSSMANN, are also spoken of as candidates. It is almost certain that Prince NAPOLEON will run for the Assembly from Corsica. Many rifles are found daily concealed in cellars and churches, and in the catacombs. The Opinion Nationale, commenting on the action of the Assembly, warns the country that it is sliding down an inclined plane into monarchy. The other journals approve of yesterday's proceedings. La France compares the speech of M. THIERS to the proclamations of WASHINGTON. The German forces have commenced evacuating the Department of the Lower Seine. It is expected that the state of siege will cease in Paris on Monday.

Still for a New Loan—Financial Hopes of the Government—Gen. Bossel a Prisoner—L'Admirault to be Governor of Paris.

VERSAILLES, June 9.—The Minister of Finance, in presenting to the Assembly a bill making provision for a loan of £100,000,000 sterling, urged the payment of the war indemnity in order that France may be rid of the Germans. The Minister said that he relied for success in the raising of the loan upon foreign confidence in the ability of France to meet her obligations, and the internal energy of the nation. He promised the exercise of strict economy in all the expenditures of the Government. The report that Gen. ROSSEL and M. COURBET have been arrested in Paris is confirmed. It has been determined that the Court-martial shall treat all offenders against the Government as military and not political prisoners. Gen. L'ADMIRAULT will probably be appointed Governor of Paris. The supplementary elections to the Assembly are fixed for the 9th of July. The Prussian troops remaining in France have begun their homeward march. The report that M. JULES FERRY has been appointed Minister to Washington is false.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

Imprisonment and Killing of British Subjects in Paris—Repression of Violence in Ireland—The Times on the Claims of Canada—A Snow-Storm in Yorkshire.

LONDON, June 9.—Official statements were made in both Houses of Parliament, today, of the circumstances of the imprisonment and killing of certain British subjects in Paris during the recent insurrection. The House of Commons has passed the Westmeath bill, enlarging the powers of the Government for the repression of violence in Ireland.

The Times of today in an editorial renewing the grounds of Canadian opposition to the Treaty of Washington, says the treaty sacrifices the interests of small communities to the convenience of powerful States; that a portion of the Empire is made a scapegoat for the peace of the whole, and that the possessions of the maritime provinces have been frittered away. The Times, however, urges the acceptance of the treaty by the Canadas as a compensation for the boon of American free trade, which is rapidly gaining ground in the United States.

BUCHAREST, June 9.—The Roumanian Chamber of Deputies has verified the election of its members, and chosen Prince GHIKA, the leader of the Conservatives, its President.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 9.—It is officially stated that the crops of all kinds in the Empire promise an excellent yield.

LONDON, June 9.—The weather is unusually cold for the season. Snow fell in Yorkshire this morning.

Strike of Colliers in Wales—Gen. Rossel Supposed to be in London.

LONDON, June 9.—The colliers on strike in Wales propose to submit their demands to arbitration. The Edinburgh Scotsman says it has positive information that ROSSEL is in London, and discredits the report of his arrest in Paris.

PARIS AFLAME.

Leaves from a Correspondent's Diary—The Entrance of the Versailleists—Scenes in the Streets—A Journalist's Risks—The Assembly's Victory—Incendiarism—General Gossip.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Wednesday, May 24, 1871.

On Sunday morning I got behind some sand-bags in front of the barricade in the Avenue de la Grande Armée to observe the enemy, who was firing over our heads at the Arc de Triomphe, on top of which the insurgents had placed guns and mortars. Found the Maillot Gate a heap of ruins, but still armed. Purchased a few pieces of shell and then back to breakfast. Returned to the Arc de Triomph about 11 P. M. with friends. Expected the troops of the Assembly to enter. Waited for them till 2 A. M. when finding all was quiet sauntered down the Champs Elysées. On passing near the Ministry of Interior met some National Guards retreating in disorder and declaring that they had been fired on. Asked what was the matter, and was abruptly told to go home or ——. Went home, and soon afterward heard the rappel, the tocsin, and the shouting of Captains in the street, indicative that something serious was apprehended. Could not resist looking out of the window, when musketry was heard in the distance. Saw large bodies of National Guards flying down the Faubourg St. Honoré quite demoralized. One Colonel was abusing his men, for not making a better stand; they had been driven from the vicinity of the Arc de Triomphe, which position was captured by the regulars with small loss. Was not then aware that the troops had entered Auteuil early in the evening; this piece of bad news was carefully concealed by the Commune. At 3 A. M. musketry fire approached. The Minister of the Interior fled in his night-cap with bundle of papers under his arm. Troops evidently advancing. Saw some National Guards firing up the faubourg on my left, and their red breeches coming down a street on my right. Four National Guards were shot down trying to escape, and the bodies taken away on a gun-carriage an hour later.

THE VERSAILLEISTS WITHIN.

Last night, several hours after the troops of the Assembly entered the Auteuil Gate, War Minister DELESCLUSE issued a proclamation to deny the entrance. But here the troops are this morning, near the centre of Paris, with the Trocadéro, Ecole Militaire, Arc de Triomphe and Popinkire barracks in their hands. Have been watching the regulars attacking barricades in the Boulevards Haussmann and Malesherbes on one hand, and in the Faubourg St. Honoré on the other. In the faubourg the soldiers are firing from the roof of the Elysée Palace, the insurgents being ensconced in houses lower down, and behind barricades. Fear the National Guards will hold the troops at bay for some time, but am told by a Colonel of Engineers that each morning a plan is drawn out, and that the Generals of Division must act up to the plan, no matter what the sacrifice. Hear that the St. Lazare Station was taken at an early hour, that a number of insurgents were found sleeping in the railway cars and offered no resistance; also, that Asnières fallen into the hands of the Assembly. Saw McMAHON and his staff inspecting the barricades at the bottom of the Boulevard Malesherbes. Looking cool and confident, though he has lost all the dash which distinguished him when he was a General of Division. It was contrary to orders that the troops broke into the Point der Jour yesterday afternoon. A number of men and women have been executed for firing on the troops from windows, and even in the open streets. Saw a poor vivandière led away captive in a piteous plight; nothing on but shirt and insurgent shoes. A delegate of the Commune rode up to a column and fired into it with his revolver; he was instantly bayoneted, and his pistol disposed of for a louis. The British Embassy is closed; no getting in or out owing to the heavy fire up the Champs Elysées and the Faubourg St. Honoré. Met an attaché wandering about like a troubled spirit, unable to procure a change of raiment. The Expiatory Chapel holds out, and a fierce fire is kept up from it, but the houses round are being gradually occupied. The inhabitants of the quarter are only too delighted to assist the regulars, and this simplifies their task. Made up my mind to try and get to the Northern Station to post letters.

A JOURNALIST'S RISKS.

After getting past several dangerous streets, got as far as to Rue St. Lazare, with a friend, young VIZETELLE. Stopped at a door where some men and women were chatting, to ask if it would be dangerous to proceed; a plumber also stopped to ask about the state of a street we had just descended, for his wife was there and near her confinement. A musketry fire was suddenly opened and the plumber was shot through the brain. We dragged him into the door, which was immediately closed. This happened about 4 P. M., and all the evening the bullets continued to whistle up and down the street without intermission. An attempt was made to fetch a doctor who lived next door, but the concierge, who had helped to take the Malakoff, had no sooner poked his nose into the street than he withdrew it again. With the help of a ladder, the leach was finally brought in through a skylight, and pronounced that nothing could be done for the poor fellow, who had been shot through the brain, and who died an hour later. Dined off a slice of ham and a bottle of St. Emilion, and smoked in the large court-yard till about 10 o'clock, when the musketry abated; made up our minds to run for it, in spite of earnest entreaties of the kind women of the house, and, indeed, the men. Got as far as the door, when ten yards off a volley was fired, and VIZETELLE and I then made up our minds to pass the night where we were. To have ventured into the street would have exposed us to a cross fire; the insurgents, too, were shooting gentlemen in plain clothes, suspecting them to be deserters from their ranks, and the regulars were following the same practice, but from another motive—they suspected them of being National Guards who had thrown off their uniform, wishing to escape. Fear that horrible massacres will take place, especially in the eccentric quarters, such as Montmartre and Belleville. By the way, Montmartre bombarded us; in addition to musketry, had shells bursting around us all night. Smoked another cigar and talked with the inhabitants of the house, who were too frightened to go to bed; people may prefer to die in their beds, but not to be killed in them. Submitted to the prejudice. One old lady had not thought badly of the Commune till the churches were plundered and the holy Virgin at the Madeleine dressed as a vivandière. After many stories and much politics, dropped off to sleep, one by one, and had sleep broken by frequent explosions in the neighborhood. Strolled into the court-yard, heard a man rush past the door and instantly fire shots, but heard him continue his way, and suppose he got clear. Morning passed away heavily, the same storm raging in the street, where not a single human being was visible.

THE FOOD SUPPLY.

Began to think the game might last some days, and that we were not provisioned. A pork butcher was in the house, but his store was not large. He had a bull-dog and a large white cat, who would have been handsome had its mother not eaten its ears when it was a kitten. Wondered how the remainder of the cat would taste in case of necessity, and mixed with the bull-dog. About 10 o'clock saw with great delight an artillery train pass by—the regulars very unconcerned. Evidently the insurgents had been disloged. Said goodbye to kind people, and made a bolt into Rue des Rochers, intersected by Rue de Vienne. Down this street bullets were pattering sharply; people did not like to cross it to reach the bakers on the other side of the way, and so money was thrown over and loaves clutched in return. Much amusement was caused when the bread or coin fell a little short, and had to be fetched at some risk. Every now and then some one darted across the street and was cheered. VIZETELLE and I accomplished the task safely, and, after running the gauntlet across four boulevards, reached home after an absence of sixteen hours; then learned that the northern station was in the hands of the insurgents, and that no trains were running.

VERSAILLES VICTORY.

Tuesday morning the insurgents still held the Madeleine, Rue Royale and barricades along west of Boulevards, the Tuileries, but in the evening the troops made a move forward, and a series of formidable positions were captured without much loss. Fortunately, Montmartre—that red stronghold—was taken at once, or there is no saying what damage its guns would have inflicted on the capital. JULES FAVRE indignantly followed the remains of the first victims of Prussian bombardment to the grave, to prove his horror of the barbarity of shelling Paris. Then the city was shelled by the Versailles Government and the Commune called on all civilized Europe to execrate the perpetrators, and yesterday and today, the Commune is engaged firing at random into the capital. However, Montmartre was silenced by Gen. L'ADMIRAULT's division suddenly laying violent hands upon it. The famous heights of Montmartre were seized from the rear, the sailors distinguishing themselves in the attack. What deeds of horror were perpetrated in the short time that the struggle lasted one may imagine. Very little mercy was shown. Was delighted, however, to see the tricolor flying from the old wind-mill of La Galette and a neighboring church. This blow must cripple the Commune. CLUSERET is said to have been charged with the defense, and to have perished in uniform thickly wadded with bank-notes. Shells still falling about in eccentric manner, and bullets coming from windows. Colonel in my street about to light his cigar, and match-box shot out of his hand. Houses opposite searched in vain. Met soldiers with three boys; one had been found with revolver, other with cartridges, third with lady's gold chain.

INCENDIARISM.

Quantities of women and lads arrested for throwing petroleum into houses in Paris; is to be burned if conquered. Insurgents driven away from Place de la Concorde, and most of barricades along the Boulevards, near the Madeline. Rue Royale in flames. Horrid tale in circulation of insurgents pumping petroleum into houses and shooting down all who tried to escape. The restaurateur, DURAND, can testify to this; he lives opposite, and says he saw it. As darkness fell, never was such a night witnessed in Paris since the days of CHARLES IX. and St. Bartholomew. A red glare went up from the Palace of the Tuileries, which had been saturated with petroleum; to its right, the Ministry of Finance and the Palais Royal blazed forth, and to the left the splendid building called the Cour des Comptes. These and other conflagrations formed a spectacle as awfully sublime as they were heartrending, and nothing could be done to save the buildings thus wantonly fired, as they were still under the insurgent guns. Energetic troops would have dashed forward at any price; but a safe and methodical system of attack had been decided on, and the people had to witness the glories of ages being lapped up by the devouring element, without an effort being made to rescue them. When the central dome of the Tuileries took fire the effect was magnificent—far beyond my power of description. It seemed as if the flames had reserved their strength for a desperate attack on this portion of the building. They sprung at it like so many fiery serpents, and, winding round its lofty roof, soon strangled and brought it to the ground. On Wednesday morning I went to the Place de la Concorde to get a close view of the scene of this disaster, and found that nothing remained of the Palace but the blackened walls. From the river side I could still see the Cour des Comptes blazing away in the quiet May sun. A General and highstaff were looking down the Avenue of the Tuileries Garden, and troops were filling up a ditch and clearing away a barricade. Looked at them for a minute, when an officer in an insolent manner threatened to make me work. The thing was being done lastly. Shells were still coming into the Place de la Concorde, which was strewed with splinters. Thought of the Irish lads who dashed up the hill at Fredericksburg, being Irish myself. The Place itself not much damaged; the Marly horses unscathed, but colossal female figure representing Lille overthrown, and head off. Couple of years ago, a strange French husband climbed up this same colossal figure, and cut its nose off, rigging that Lille resembled his wife; know the artist who replaced the nasal organ, and wonder what has become of him in this hurly-burly.

GENERAL GOSSIP.

Col. CONOLLY, the new British military attaché, tried to get into Paris on Tuesday, but was forced to retire; did manage to get in today, after having been nearly slain by a discharge from a gun-boat, which did not recognise neutral, and fired on the Colonel—as he says, a broadside, must be some mistake, gun-boats having one heavy piece in bow. Sailors, too, all gone or taken. Thirty tars—not true blues—captured on Monday, have probably helped old Charon to inaugurate his bark by this time.... The sailors, not of the Commune, are greatly exasperated, having suffered heavy losses in defense of Paris and despising Parisians. Saw one old tar specially irritable ill-treat a prisoner, who pleaded that he had a wife and child. "You have butchered three of my children," was the gruff reply, accompanied by further application of Jack's rifle-butt. Firemen coming up from the surrounding villages to aid in extinguishing Paris. Every one forced to lend a hand and carry a bucket. Fire-engines of the most primitive and disgraceful sort. Small squirts and no hose laid on. People form double chain, and pass water; one side hands full, and the other returns empty buckets. Saw in the distance yesterday what at first glance appeared a Roger de Coverly, girls on one side, soldiers on the other; half expected to hear the music strike up and see a gallant chasseur lead his partner up the sides and down the middle. On closer inspecting, saw the soldiers were passing along buckets filled with water, and the girls opposite them handing back the empty ones to the pump. Both citoyennes and soldiers were chatting gayly at their work.

Incidents of the Downfall of the Commune—Death of the Archbishop—Slaughter at Dominicans—Lex Talionis—The Work of Denunciation.

Correspondence of the London Times.

The Archbishop of Paris died with the serene courage of a martyr. In answer to the insults of his executioners he said, "Do not profane the word liberty; it is to us alone it belongs, for we shall die for liberty and faith." On Tuesday the Archbishop and his fellow captives were transferred from the prison of Mazas to that of La Roquette. The following is the dispatch of Gen. DOREL, acquainting the Government with the particulars as far as they have been ascertained:

Account of the persons of mark shot by the Commune on Wednesday evening, the 27th of May, and details respecting their execution: "Monseigneur Darboy, Archbishop of Paris; M. Bonjean, President in the Cure of the Madeleine; Ducoudray, a Jesuit father; Allard, also a Jesuit father; in all six victims shot on Wednesday evening. On the night between Friday and Thursday, sixteen other persons appear to have been shot. They were: M. Benzy, a Jesuit father; Gaubert, a Jesuit father; Alivaint, a Jesuit father, Under Secretary to the Archbishop; Gard, a seminarist; Polancilin, a priest; Seigneret, a seminarist; Houillon, a seminary; Ferny, a missionary; Sabatier, curate of Notre Dame de Lorette, and Jecker, an American, (sic.) (Another dispatch calls the latter the banker JACQUEMER.) As for l'Abbé BURAY; Grand Vicaire de Paris, it is doubtful whether or not he has, as one version says, escaped. There are, besides those named, three persons whose names are unknown. The first two persons of distinction were shot in prison, and their bodies carried to the Maria of the Twentieth Arrondissement. The sixteen others, with a group of thirty-eight gendarmes, were taken to Père La Chaise at night, under the pretext of being transferred to another place of confinement, and were then shot. Four others whose names are unknown, were shot on Saturday. The foregoing is the list of twenty names. The total thus known comprises sixty-four victims. On Saturday the surviving prisoners were about to be shot by the Commune, which had established its head-quarters at the prison, when, at the instigation of one of the old staff, who had been retained in his office by the Commune, they rebelled and withdrew into one portion of the prison, where they barricaded themselves, and where the insurgents tried to burn them alive. The mattresses, however, being of wood, preserved them, so that they were not much hurt."

SLAUGHTER OF DOMINICANS.

About twenty of these priests were imprisoned on Friday, the 19th, at Fort Bicêtre. On Thursday, when they had to be abandoned, they were hurried away to the Gobelins, on the promise of being set at liberty. Instead of this they were driven to work on the barricades, then dragged to a prison in the Avenue d'Italie. At 4½ in the afternoon they were visited by a certain M. CHERISIER, with a company of the One Hundred and First Battalion of the National Guards, who deliberately loaded in their presence. The outside door of the prison was then thrown open, and they were ordered to leave it one by one. As they marched out singly they were shot successively by order of CHERISIER, with the exception of the narrator of the occurrence, and one or two others who were either missed or slightly wounded and escaped. Twelve bodies of these unhappy men have already been recovered. There is also no doubt that M. GUSTAVE CHAUDEY, one of the principal editors of the Siècle, and a literary man of some eminence and high character, who had incurred the displeasure of the Communists, has been shot by them.

LEX TALIONIS—HORRIBLE SCENES.

On the other side the executions are wholesale. It is estimated that upward of 3,000 persons have been shot already on the left bank of the Seine alone, evidently a small proportion of the total number. Wherever women and children are to be observed leaning over the parapet of the Seine intently regarding some object below, one may be sure that the attraction is a group of hideously mutilated corpses of men who have been brought down to the river side and then with their backs to the wall have met their doom. On the sloping roads leading down from the quays to the river may also be seen inequalities where the road has been recently disturbed, and where the freshly-turned earth indicates burial-places. Not far from these bodies were lying several dead horses, from which the people were cutting steaks. The inside of the Hôtel de Ville presents a curious scene, the solid masses of stone and lime of which the rubbish is composed having fallen in in the form of a crater, which fills up the whole central place. Under this mound are said to be buried from 200 to 300 insurgents, who were unable to escape at the last moment, and thus fell the victims of the conflagration they had themselves originated. * * * I took a walk down the Rue Rivoli toward the Hôtel de Ville, to judge of the amount of damage done, and at the corner of the Rue Castiglione became aware of the approach of a great crowd of people yelling and shaking their fists. The cortége was headed by a company of mounted gendarmes, behind whom came two artillerymen, dragging between them a soiled bundle of rags that muttered and struggled, and fell down under the blows that were showered upon it by all who were within reach. It was a woman, who had been caught in the act of spreading petroleum. Her face was bleeding and her hair streaming down her back, from which her clothing had been torn. On they dragged her, followed by a hooting mob, till they reached the corner of the Louvre, and there they propped her up against a wall, already half dead from the treatment she had received. The crowd ranged itself in a circle, and I have never seen a picture more perfect and complete in its details than was presented by that scene. The gasping, shrinking figure in the centre, surrounded by a crowd who could scarce be kept from tearing her in pieces, who waved their arms crying, "à l'eau à l'eau!" on one side a barricade, still strewn with broken guns and hats—a dead National Guard lying in the fosse—behind a group of mounted gendarmes, and behind a perspective of ruined arches and blackened houses, culminating in the extreme distance in the still burning Hotel de Ville. Presently two revolvers were discharged, and the bundle of rags fell forward in a pool of blood. The popular thirst for vengeance was satisfied, and so the crowd dispersed in search of further excitement elsewhere. There was one group fadling down the Rue de la Paix, that was of peculiar interest, calling for a greater amount of curses and hisses than usually accompanies their progress. It consisted of some twenty or thirty girls, well dressed and pretty, shop-women of a sewing-machine establishment, who were accused of having invigilated a company of soldiers, and after dallying with them like Judiths, of having poisoned them all in wine. The young ladies tripped along, surrounded by a cordon of guards, smiling on the crowd that was execrating them, and marching gally to the Place Vendôme, where they probably were shot. The women of Paris have appeared late upon the scene, but their appearance was inevitable. Many have been killed on barricades, some in open street combats, but their special work has been the organisation of the system of fires, which has, unfortunately, answered but too well. Three hundred women, dressed in National Guard uniform, have been taken down the Seine in open boats, and it is said that many of the sham sailors who defended the Rue Royale so bravely were women in disguise. Near the Pare Monceau a melancholy episode occurred. A husband and wife were seized and ordered to march forward toward the Place Vendôme, a distance of a mile and a half. They were both of them invalids, and unable to walk so far. The woman sat down on the kerbstone and declined to move a step, in spite of her husband's entreaties that she would try. She persisted in her refusal, and they both knelt down together, begging the gendarmes who accompanied them to shoot them at once; if shot they were to be. Twenty revolvers were fired, but they still breathed, and it was only at the second discharge that they finally sank down dead. The gendarmes then rode away, leaving the bodies as they had fallen. A party of 600 prisoners had just gone past my window escorted by a company of hussars. Among their number was a woman with flowing black hair, who showed symptoms of contumacy, and was several times pushed back into the ranks with the flat of the sword. She made several attempts to escape, and at last, having wearied the patience of her escort, a soldier raised his revolver and shot her through the heart. She fell a heap of dark clothes; the cortége passed on, leaving her as she had fallen, and there she still lies.

THE WORK OF DENUNCIATION.

Vengeance pursues the Commune. I have just seen 2,000 prisoners led off by the cavalry of Gen. DE GALLIFET. Most of them were soldiers—or at least wore the red trousers of the army. They marched three abreast, four and four, and walked through the streets bareheaded and dejected. Some of the prisoners were women; but 1,500 were of the army, and the crowds who stood in the streets had the most perfect confidence that they would be shot. Yet they cheered, clapped their hands and shouted, as if they were in a theatre seeing a farce. The work of denunciation is going on here with terrible ferocity. M. NADAR, the famous photographer and aeronaut, has been arrested for his supposed sympathies with the Commune; and an old man of far more humble position, but also well known in the frequenters of the boulevards—the tobacconist under NADAR's studio—has also been carried away for the same reason. Anybody may denounce you, and you are lucky if you are not shot forthwith. Women have as bad a chance as the men, for they are very ferocious, and are known to be guilty of the most horrid treachery. They fire out of the windows with sly revolvers, and are great in the use of petroleum and vitriol. The most intimate friends and the oldest acquaintances betray each other in the most unworthy manner. An old grudge will spring up that has slept for years, and you are denounced without cause as a bad fellow and a possible friend of the Commune. A linendraper of the Rue d'Amsterdam was denounced to some soldiers as having supported the Commune. The soldiers instantly entered his house, and bid the poor linen-draper follow them. He asked to be allowed to finish his toilet and fetch his papers. He received the reply that the completion of his toilet was quite unnecessary, that he would not be detained long, and that all the papers in the world were useless. He was taken to the first convenient spot and shot.

PUNISHMENT OF THE CHIEFS.

DOMBROWSKI died in the bed-room of the Hotel de Ville, formerly occupied by Mdlle. HAUSSMANN. The day after his escape from La Muette he received three rifle shots while at a barricade in the Rue d'Ornano. He was transferred from there to the Hotel de Ville, where he died of his wounds. DARIS, CLUSE was killed on Tuesday at the barricade of the Chateau d'Eau. His face was much disfigured by a portion of a burning wall which had fallen on it. His identity is amply proved by papers found in his pocket. The Insurgent Gen. BISSON who was captured, was shot yesterday, as well as TAVERNIER, a member of the Commune. MILLIERE, a Deputy of the National Assembly, was arrested on Thursday, in the Place Luxembourg. He was thence led to the Place du Panthéon, and there shot. When the soldiers were raising their rifles to despatch him, he cried, "Vive la Commune!" "Vive l'Humanité!" "Vive le Peuple!"

A TOUR OF EXPLORATION.

I have just now returned (May 27) from a visit to the Embassy, and a short tour of exploration. Lord LYONS arrived in Paris yesterday, from Versailles, and instantly found himself under fire. The Embassy bears many marks of the fight, and a few minutes before my visit a shell, said to have been charged with petroleum, burst in the adjoining garden belonging to M. PERRIER. The Faubourg St. Honoré was a wilderness of uprooted paving-stones and torn-down proclamations of the Commune, inhabited by soldiers. I have in vain tried to find a house which did not exhibit some bullet-holes; the iron shutters of the shops are riddled, the windows broken, and the angles of the houses here and there splintered by shells. On the Church of St. Augustin I observed the words, "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," peppered with the bullets which these rival sets of Republicans fired at each other. The pavements of the Boulevards Haussmann and Malesherbes is strewed with the branches of trees lopped off by shells and bullets, and women are dragging them into their houses for fire-wood. Here and there are pools of scarcely-dried blood, and everywhere are persons with buckets full of mortar, stopping up the air-holes of their cellars to prevent the insurgent women and children dropping lighted petroleum-balls into the cellars. The effort of the dispossessed insurgents is now, by means of shells cast from the Heights of Chaumont, Belleville, and by private agents, to set on fire the whole quarter which they have abandoned, and there is a yellow, ghastly look in the atmosphere as charged with the smoke of burning houses and public buildings, that the sun shines feebly through it. The Tuileries is a mere shell. The smoke from the Ministry of Finance and the magnificent public buildings at the corner of the Rue Royale and the Rue de Rivoli is still rising from their ruins, and in the celebrated bonnet-maker's, Mme. DROUARY, No. 3 Rue de Rivoli, well known to many of your lady readers, a number of young women employed there took refuge in the cellars, and are now stifled beneath a pile of rubbish twenty or thirty feet high. The Rue Royale, which I could only see a portion of, is like a Mitchelstown mound of rubbish, and the fire is still extending. I could not venture to approach it, for every passer-by is pressed into the chaîne, and compelled in a stifling atmosphere to take a three hours' turn in passing buckets of water to extinguish the flames, coming out at the end of his devoir blackened with smoke and perspiration, and utterly incapacitated for fulfilling the duties of a correspondent. Evading this dangerous locality, and yet anxious to get nearer the centre of action, I turned back and endeavored to approach the Madeleine from the Boulevards Malesherbes; here I was met by a barricade of branches of trees; and the cheerful words addressed to a man immediately in front of me of "A la pompe!"—so I narrowly again escaped the fate of having to work like a galley-slave at a fire-engine, which was sending useless jets of water into flames which seemed not likely to be extinguished till they had completed their fatal work. Turning back by the Boulevard Haussmann, I reached the Grand Opera, a mass of barricades, and too full of soldiers to be a pleasant resort, especially as petroleum shells were falling on the Boulevard des Italiens. The sound of the firing seemed to be receding, and the regulars have reached the strong barricade at the Church of St. Vincent de Paul had been taken by assault, and the insurgents are being driven to their last stronghold. They are reported to be a small but desperate band of 20,000 or 30,000 men, fighting with their lives forfeited at any rate, and determined to sell them as dearly as possible, and make as much destruction as they can compass before they die. Thousands of prisoners of both sexes and all ages are being hourly marched off to Versailles. All those palaces which made Paris the wonder and admiration of modern times are heaps of smouldering ruins—here finely-cut stone shattered, her gardens laid waste, her gutters running with blood, and an awful pall settling down heavily over her dying agonies as the completion, in compliance with "the inexorable logic of facts", which has formed her only religion, her own suicide. As I write, there is a ghastly hush down below my window, and I rush to the balcony to see, between two lines of cavalry with pistols cocked, a body of about 150 prisoners drawn up in the street. They are prisoners, and a rapidly-forming crowd yells and hoots curses and execrations upon them as they are made to go down on their knees in the dust. I run down to inspect them more closely. I find them a most evil, sullen-looking crew, bare-headed—for they are made to carry the heavy brass helmet in their hands, which is their distinguishing badge. They will probably be shot, to a man, for they have been caught pouring petroleum into houses instead of water, and have been taken red-handed at the Hotel de Ville and at the "Halles," which they have been the means of setting on fire. From the manner of the small crowd which presses round, and the epithets in which they indulge, the Commune has small sympathy in this neighborhood. Such a show of old grudges will spring up that has slept for years, and you are denounced without cause as a bad fellow and a possible friend of the Commune. A linendraper of the Rue d'Amsterdam was denounced to some soldiers as having supported the Commune. The soldiers instantly entered his house, and bid the poor linen-draper follow them. He asked to be allowed to finish his toilet and fetch his papers. He received the reply that the completion of his toilet was quite unnecessary, that he would not be detained long, and that all the papers in the world were useless. He was taken to the first convenient spot and shot.

PUNISHMENT OF THE CHIEFS.

DOMBROWSKI died in the bed-room of the Hotel de Ville, formerly occupied by Mdlle. HAUSSMANN. The day after his escape from La Muette he received three rifle shots while at a barricade in the Rue d'Ornano. He was transferred from there to the Hotel de Ville, where he died of his wounds. DARIS, CLUSE was killed on Tuesday at the barricade of the Chateau d'Eau. His face was much disfigured by a portion of a burning wall which had fallen on it. His identity is amply proved by papers found in his pocket. The Insurgent Gen. BISSON who was captured, was shot yesterday, as well as TAVERNIER, a member of the Commune. MILLIERE, a Deputy of the National Assembly, was arrested on Thursday, in the Place Luxembourg. He was thence led to the Place du Panthéon, and there shot. When the soldiers were raising their rifles to despatch him, he cried, "Vive la Commune!" "Vive l'Humanité!" "Vive le Peuple!"

A TOUR OF EXPLORATION.

I have just now returned (May 27) from a visit to the Embassy, and a short tour of exploration. Lord LYONS arrived in Paris yesterday, from Versailles, and instantly found himself under fire. The Embassy bears many marks of the fight, and a few minutes before my visit a shell, said to have been charged with petroleum, burst in the adjoining garden belonging to M. PERRIER. The Faubourg St. Honoré was a

NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

The Contest for the Governorship—The Republicans Digging Against Time—No Progress During the Morning Session.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CONCORD, N. H., June 9.—The Democrats are not gaining their victory so easily after all. Having agreed on their plan of action at the last secret caucus, the Republicans came into the House this morning more determined than ever to push off the vote for Governor, and were united. No progress was made by the Democrats at the forenoon session, the Republicans insisting on having the journal read, with the hope of more long yea and nay votes, which occupied the entire time. At the beginning of the afternoon the Republicans, through their leader, Mr. WADLEIGH, of Wakefield, boldly announced their plan, and defied the Democracy. Mr. WADLEIGH then appealed to the Democrats to postpone the vote on Governor until the absent sick men could be present, as a matter of simple justice, pointing out that the people they represented have as much right to a vote on the matter as those whose representatives were present, and then noting an indisposition on the part of his opponents to grant this, he formally declared that his party would resort to every honorable method to prevent a vote until next week. By careful manœuvring the Republican members managed to hold the floor for a couple of hours. During their speeches the Democrats repeatedly interrupted and called out insultingly, and succeeded in creating a great deal of noise and confusion.

LATER.—It is now 12½, and three more roll calls are to be had on the question of excusing members. Each party seems determined to sit until the other yields.

Proceedings of the Legislature—The Governorship—The Late Senator Thrasher.

CONCORD, N. H., June 9.—The House met at 10 o'clock. There was a discussion about reading so much of the journal of yesterday as relates to calling the rolls, the correctness of which was questioned. The motion not to read was withdrawn, and the reading of the rolls on the votes of yesterday was proceeded with. After the reading of the journal, Mr. WADLEIGH, of Milford, offered a resolution that F. M. MINGER and WILLIAM M. PARSONS be stricken from the roll of the House as ineligible, they not having resided in the State the time required by law, also, the name of S. B. PAGE, of Concord, he not having received a majority of the votes cast. Mr. BINGHAM opposed it, and moved that the resolutions lay on the table, which was carried. A motion to adjourn to 4 o'clock P. M., on Monday, was defeated by a strict party vote. The House adjourned to 3 o'clock from today.

The Democrats and Labor Reformers are in caucus during the recess, and threaten all night sessions.

In the Senate, the Committee on the examination of the returns of the election of members, after hearing testimony from the town of Plainfield relative to the votes cast there for SAMUEL THRASHER, that they were intended for SAMUEL P. THRASHER, made a return, which was accepted, that the late SAMUEL P. THRASHER was duly elected a member of the Senate from District No. 10, and that the seat was made vacant by his death. The Democrats are jubilant over the organization of the House, and will try to force a vote for Governor before the sick Republican members are brought on the field of action, but it is doubtful if a vote will be reached this week. Mr. BENTON continues to act as Clerk, Mr. JACKSON not having been qualified.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The first business in order was the resolution of Mr. BINGHAM, that the Senate be informed of the resolution of the House, and on this Mr. BINGHAM moved the previous question.

Mr. WADLEIGH said it was the intention, he supposed, of the minority to extend this matter, by debate and otherwise, to a period of time which would enable the minority to bring in their sick members, and he proposed to do his part in the matter, but he would agree, on the part of himself and party, to vote on Monday, at 4 P. M. On the point of moving the previous question, he spoke an hour and three-quarters, in a very rambling manner, and was called to order, when a motion to adjourn was made and the roll called, but the motion did not prevail. Then a motion was made to allow Mr. WADLEIGH to proceed, on which the roll was called and decided in the negative.

Mr. AGLY, of Manchester, obtained the floor, and occupied twenty minutes. He was followed by Mr. WILSON, of Keene, who spoke fifteen minutes.

Mr. ADAMS was now called to the chair, and several members paired.

Mr. FLETCHER, of Nashua, moved to adjourn to Monday, at 4 P. M. Lost—189 to 187.

Mr. RUSSELL then spoke on the question before the House.

THE SENATE EVENING SESSION.

The Senate met at 3 P. M., when a resolution was concurred in by Mr. FLINT that a message be sent to the House by the Clerk, informing that body that the Senate is organized by the choice of Hon. CHARLES H. CAMPBELL temporary presiding officer, and the attendance of JOHN W. CURRIER, Clerk, and LUTHER G. MORRILL, Assistant Clerk; that a vacancy exists in Senatorial District No. 1 by reason of no election by the people, and that DANIEL MARCY and WILLIAM R. MARTIN are the two highest candidates; and that a vacancy exists in Senatorial District No. 10, and that ALBERT HALL and A. SHEPPARD are the two highest candidates; and that the Senate is ready to meet the House in Convention at such time as the House may designate.

Mr. HALL, of District No. 5, moved to strike out all after the latter "highest candidates," and to insert that the Senate will be ready to meet the House in Convention on Monday next, at 4 P. M., for the purpose of filling vacancies in the Senate, agreeably to the provisions of the Constitution. The amendment and resolution were rejected by a strict party vote.

The Senate then took a recess.

There probably never was so small a party representation in any legislative body, who already have and are promised to receive official positions as the "Labor Reformers" in our House of Representatives. They are six in number, and some of these have never claimed to be labor reformers, but were elected on independent tickets, and are simply disaffected Republicans who have to consider themselves aggrieved by Mr. ROLLINS or some of the leaders of the party. To them are allotted the financial keys of the State. The Speaker, Assistant Clerk of the House, Sergeant-at-Arms and various minor offices for friends are already promised. To be a "Labor Reformer" is to be master of the situation. The Democrats are to have Governor, President of the Senate and Clerk of the same, the Secretary of State, and some door-keepers. It is admitted by the Democrats that no obnoxious party measure can be carried in so small a working majority. It is the intention of the majority to fill Senatorial District No. 1 with Hon. DANIEL MARCY, and leave for political reasons District No. 10 vacant.

CONCORD, June 9—11½ P. M.—A general filibustering is going on in the House with no prospect of an advance to-night. The contest may be continued until morning. There is no prospect for a ballot for Governor this week.

OHIO.

The Gubernatorial Canvass—Hon. B. F. Wade's Position.

CINCINNATI, June 9.—The Gazette, this morning, prints a letter from the Hon. B. F. WADE, on which its announcement was based that Mr. WADE would, under certain circumstances, accept the Republican nomination for Governor. It publishes this, it says, because an effort is made to impress on the public mind that Mr. WADE desires to enter the contest for the nomination. Mr. WADE says he has received many communications like the one to which the late one was a reply, and to which he has replied that he would not accept of the nomination were it offered him. He says on reflection, however, he was satisfied that than was uniting the case too strongly. "When I remember," he says, "how firmly and generously the great Republican Party of Ohio stood by me for eighteen years during the most turbulent and perilous period of our history, should the Republican Convention consider that it is essential to success to order me again into the field, I could not disobey their mandate without base ingratitude, if not desertion of principle." He then simply alludes to the course of the Democratic Party

FLOOD AND WIND.

Disastrous Freshet at Hot Springs, Ark.

Great Losses by the Inundation at New-Orleans.

The Tornado of Blasting Fire in Illinois.

ARKANSAS.

Effects of the Extraordinary Freshet at Hot Springs—Bridges, Hotels, Bath-Houses and Dwelling-Houses Swept Away.

The Hot Springs (Arkansas) Courier, of June 1, contains full particulars of the extraordinary freshet which occurred there on Saturday week, and was mentioned in our telegrams a few days ago. Hot Springs Creek is formed by the union of two small creeks at the head of what is known as Hot Springs Valley—one coming from the north-east and the other from the north-west, the latter much the larger, but both rising within a short distance of the town of Hot Springs, and constantly fed by mountain springs. Throughout the day there had been an occasional slight mist and sprinkle of rain, but at about two o'clock in the evening rain began to fall in vast volume and continued for about twenty-five minutes, when it abated for about five minutes, and then commenced again as hard as before. It soon became apparent that the creek was rapidly rising, and that another hour's rain like that of the past half hour would send it high out of its usual bed. But the calculations of all, in that respect were more than realized, for in a little over an hour after the heavy rain first began to fall, many of the houses in the valley were threatened with destruction. The Courier says:

The debris and rubbish left along the banks of the creek, swept down every stream, for greater velocity, until, meeting with some formidable obstruction, it was hurled up edgewise and perpendicular, forming a dam of no mean pretensions or power. Before it was quite dark, STAATS & LEERER'S new bath-house was partially submerged, and the foot bridge in front of it washed off. At 6 o'clock the attention of the citizens at the lower end of the valley was called to the threatening danger in which TERRY & HOFFMAN'S new bath-house, WALSH'S St. Nicholas saloon, and the east wing of the Hot Springs Hotel stood of being totally annihilated by the fierce and raging flood that was every moment growing more frantic, increasing in volume and fury every moment, and continually depositing large accessions to the already fearful jam of flood-wood, lumber, and wrecks of bridges and buildings from above. Legs were at once extinguished in the oil of the hotel, and in the bath-house and saloon, and preparations for the bath-house were made. When the danger was the most imminent at the lower end of the valley, a couple of mounted messenger arrived, with the news that the upper end of the town was moving, and that SPRELE'S billiard-saloon, the Conley House, the California House and all were swept away, all which with his own eyes he proved to be true, and stated that the Hale House, the Ellsworth Infirmary, WALDINGSFORD'S store, the saloon, bath-house and part of the Hot Springs Hotel would surely go; but, as luck would have it, the elements expended their destructive wrath upon the property of those at the north end.

The first building that swept away on the upper end of the town was the bridge leading over to the Catholic Church; next was the billiard-saloon of WILL SPRELE, then a couple of stables, then the Conley House, owned by MICHAEL CONLEY, and put up by him last year. The next was a house owned by Mrs. ELLIOTT, formerly occupied by Dr. WALSH, grocery store, and next the California House, owned and kept by THOMAS BASS. Next to this was a house, and then BRIERY & PARCHMAN'S new law-office. This tremendous pile and wreck was furiously precipitated against the cottonwood-tree along the banks at the north end of the Akin House, and the Akin House itself, tearing and breaking off some of the trees, which were nearly, if not quite, two feet in diameter, and the corner of Grand-st. the end of the house was too strong for the watery element, and the roofs of the wrecked buildings and other debris were shot high up to the top, or to a second story, down the street in front of the Methodist Church. The terrible crash of the wreck, and the roaring and surging of the waters at this point for a time was fearful in the extreme, and, had it not been for the large shade trees at the end of the Akin House, it too would have been swept away; and then, in all probability, every building in the valley that overtook the wreck would have been washed away. Most of the wreck was either checked up at the end of the Akin House, or in front of it, the length of the house, along the creek, being about 200 feet, and around which the scene of that night and the next morning bespeared description. This house lost its fine elevated steps spanning the creek, and had its "water table" and lower lattice-work seriously damaged. The flood-jam at the north end overtopped its roof, and the water was shoe-deep over the porch and upper parlor. The bridge at its lower angle was one of the first carried away. This struck the kitchen of the dwelling-house of Dr. G. W. LAWRENCE, which was occupied by Rev. Mr. HUTE, Episcopal minister of this place and swept it very rapidly down the stream. Next in its ravages it took away the two Rester Bridges, and the bridge to EV. RECTOR'S bath-house, more or less damaging the latter. Here its violence somewhat abated, and little damage was done until it reached STAATS & LEERER'S bath-house and store-house, where it broke off a bridge, knocked out some posts and supports to both of these buildings, and piled them up against TERRY & HOFFMAN'S bath-house and WALSH'S St. Nicholas saloon, which are built against piers and supports of the porch and walk of the Hot Springs Hotel. TERRY'S bath-house is built upon stone piers rising out of the creek, and WALSH'S saloon upon posts. The bath-house suffered much the most from the flood, having five of its piers undermined, and the building somewhat twisted over, while the St. Nicholas saloon only lost two posts, and was but slightly damaged. The bridges below the Hot Springs House were carried away, and some lower floors of houses barely submerged.

Although a direct pecuniary loss incurred by the citizens of this place from the flood is not so great as might be supposed, yet it is a very serious loss to most of the parties, as it was their all, or nearly so. The greatest inconvenience, in fact, to all, arises from being thrown out of house, home and business during the busy season. The Rev. Father GAZZETTI, the Catholic priest of this place, who has been boarding and rooming at the Conley House, lost his library and wardrobe, and that the schoolmaster, SAMUEL NEWLIN, colored, met with like misfortune. One of the boarders at the California House lost a trunk containing $3,000, and found it again the next evening in the jam near the Akin House. It has been reported by parties living some five miles up the creek that this unprecedented rise was caused by the bursting of a water-spout or cloud along its banks in their vicinity, which story has gained credence among some. It is looked upon as remarkable that no lives were lost, and no person but Mrs. CONLEY hurt, which occurred as the house was being crushed by the drift. The entire disaster is attributable to the popular folly which prevails in this highly romantic and lovely valley of spanning the creek, or in building out over it. Had it not been for the obstructions thus placed in it, and over it, no damage would have been done."

NEW-ORLEANS.

Particulars of the Overflow in the Rear of the City—A Million Dollars Worth of Property Destroyed.

Our New-Orleans exchanges of Sunday and Monday morning last come to us freighted with details of the damage done by the crevasse in the new canal, by which the rear portion of the city was flooded on Saturday. For several days previous there had been heavy rains, latterly accompanied by stormy easterly winds, so that the draining canals had been brimming, and the lake had been unusually high. Saturday morning the navigation canals, owing to the lake water being blown city-ward were bank high in several places, and the general appearance of things indicated imminent danger of an inundation. At last the threatened calamity came. During the morning the levee of the New Canal at Broad-street gave way, and the breach, which was at first small, speedily widened into a crevasse, through which the flood poured upon the streets with irresistible force. Attempts were made to close the break, but every effort proved vain, and early in the afternoon the struggle was abandoned. The great area between the old and new canals, and bounded in the rear by the Metairie Ridge, was by dark successively inundated as far in as Bolivar-street. Heavy showers fell during the day, and the wind, steadily blowing from the east, came at times in a furious gale, and again in violent gusts. Hence the water kept steadily advancing toward the city and deepening in the rear.

DETAILS OF THE ACCIDENT.

The Commercial Bulletin, of Monday morning, says:

"Since Saturday night the flood has invaded all that portion of the city comprised between the two canals, extending up as far as Villere-street, the upper part of which, reckoning from Canal-street, is impassable except to light water craft. From 7 o'clock on Saturday night to the same hour yesterday morning, the water rose sixteen inches on Derbigny-street, and the inundated district presents a sad appearance. Distresses everywhere manifested itself, the cries of the thousands upon thousands who visited Claiborne-street, the centre of the district still above water, permitting the city to continue their travel. At noon, the water in the canals, which indicated an excess of from six to eight inches above the flood level of noon, had receded two inches, and by night the old canal was lower by four inches. At the lake the water had also fallen below the level of the track, and although there was over a foot of water on the road between Milneburg and Gentilly road, the trains of the Pontchartrain Railroad were enabled to bring in the passengers by the Morgan steamer from Mobile without any accident.

"Early yesterday morning Superintendent BADGER visited the worst districts, and several skiffs, tendered by our courteous City G. N. KOUNS, were immediately placed under the charge of Sergt. TAYLOR, who, with the suburban Police, have been working night and day in moving the destitute, many of whom were found sick, exhausted and hungry, and had to be sent to the Charity Hospital for shelter. At the suggestion of Capt. BADGER, 200 or 300 loaves of bread were purchased by the Board of Police and distributed among the needy. The gaps in the canals were constantly attended to by the Department of Improvements, but we regret to say with not as much success as might have been expected. The imperfect manner in which the flow over the bank of the new canal and the old canal at Claiborne-street had been checked yesterday, caused a large quantity of water to be emptied in the overflowed district, and necessitated new labor in building a board and sand levee on both the west and south sides of the bridge. The break at the intersection of Gravier-street with Bayou St. John was promptly closed, and the city, on the lower side of the old canal, was comparatively free from water. At the hour we write the break in the new canal, near Rampart-avenue, is still about thirty feet wide, the water pouring in in torrents, and, necessarily, the depth of the water between the two canals. The increase, however, is not great, only about two inches in the last twenty-four hours, owing to the rending of the lake, assisted by a high south-wester that prevailed during the greater portion of the day. Another break occurred last night about 8 o'clock in the embankment of the Marigny Canal, near the Gentilly road, and although the gap was quickly closed with bales of hay and sacks of the latter, and the inhabitants in the neighborhood expressed their willingness to perform the necessary labor, there was no material at hand to do so.

"The feelings, not only of the unfortunate residents of the flooded district, but of the whole community, are bitter against the city authorities who have failed to prevent the recurrence of the disaster of last year, and the eventual loss of the property holders and residents cannot fall short of a million dollars—injury to the buildings, the numerous kitchen gardens, the dairies, the roads and ditches that have been submerged by the destructive element. As to the injury done in the way of suffering and inconvenience to the people, the value of property and the prosperity of the city, it is indeed incalculable. At midnight we have the report from the Fifth Precinct Station that the water on the streets is at last receding, and there is a good prospect that in two or three days the condition of affairs will be not so materially changed for the better, and that the cormorants who availed themselves of the misfortunes of other people by charging a dollar a head to convey them in skiffs a distance of half a block, shall have, like the water, vanished from the scene."

INCIDENTS.

The reporters of the Times gleaned the following incidents:

"On Common-street the flood was visible in the overflowing gutters as far up as Rampart-street, but by a fearless adventure, in the dry shoes and a short journey through the middle of the street, the writer succeeded in reaching the corner of Claiborne-street with dry feet. The quay formed there by the railroad track was crowded with bewildered women and children, police officers, bedraggled men and vehicles. Little fishes in twenty feet of water were piled with wretched refugees, and empty wagons were filling. Boats were constantly arriving with new victims from the overflow, and turning a brief stay nearly a dozen families, many of them without as much as a change of clothing, came in. Placidly cruising over the troubled waters were men, boys and girls, and even women, some armed with rifles, across display of personal charms was rather more successive of quiet desperation than any less worldly feeling. Many appeared undecided whether to laugh or cry, and compromised the matter by exclaiming at the mishaps of others, and remaining very silent in contemplation of their own adversity. A corpulent gentleman, whose fortorn attempt to propel himself to a neighboring house on a great unwieldly log culminated in an artistic dive, created great merriment. At Adventurous Cushite made a short voyage in a bath-tub, but his efforts at navigation were soon frustrated by an immense snag-covered beam, which, clutched in his right hand, not only prevented an active use of the pole, but eventually capsized the boat. The entire street was thronged with boats, which were constantly loafering. Every fence, house, and even the tops of the taller bushes were completely covered with people of all conditions, and several fences were almost black with crickets. The passage near them created the wildest consternation among these insect castaways, but all huddled close together, and appeared to cling to the last vestige of earth with the tenacity of life itself. In one spot were massed perhaps a hundred black spiders of immense size, a large number of which contained their young in small snowy bags. A broad strip of scum which had gathered just opposite the Marine Hospital, was fairly alive with them, and over the whole face of the country millions of grasshoppers, beetles, caterpillars and smaller insects abounded.

"The removal of the sick commenced about 12 o'clock night before last, and continued until perhaps 12 o'clock yesterday. A large number were brought to the Marine Hospital, and others taken to the residences of their friends in more central localities. One lady we heard of was taken from her bed after having lain there until the water rose to a depth of two feet on the floor. Though the grounds surrounding it are submerged, the Marine Hospital, being built on brick pillars, is still free from water. The small huts in rear of this are chiefly occupied by colored people, and all are rendered uninhabitable. On the voyage out, the writer's attention was attracted by two horses standing close together and apparently motionless. Drawing nearer, the skiff grided over a float, to which they were anchored. In this vicinity three children had taken refuge on a rickety shed, and sat patiently waiting to be picked up by the Police-boat. A strong current here gave evidence of a near approach to the breach, and, a few minutes after, a skiff brought the boat into Hagan-avenue. So fierce was the tide that with great difficulty the Times craft steamed it out, taking advantage of the eddies, she was at length brought up to the Hagan crevasse.

"The break at Hagan-avenue, at about 1 o'clock yesterday, was twenty-five feet wide, with a depth of between eight and nine feet. City Surveyor BELL, who had succeeded in getting the necessary materials at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, remained at the scene with thirty men all night. They were successful in opening the crevasse, with a bridge of piling, which was rapidly being filled with sand-bags. At the time of closing the opening had been completed, but the water still rushed through the centre with great force. The New Canal at that time was about a foot higher than the water in the other side, and a wind from the south, though it did not increase in volume, blew with great violency. The men were almost completely exhausted, and Mr. BELL anxiously awaited the arrival of fresh laborers. Two parties started out in carts by way of Common-street, but both were compelled to return. From the dredging-machine lying opposite the break, where our reporter landed, he had a fair opportunity of seeing the extent of the overflow. From Claiborne-street, between the two canals, as far as the eye could reach was one vast lake covering an area of at least six square miles. The shell road was quite dry, and the writer learned that it is not yet under water this side of the Half-way House.

"The disaster is attributed to the injudicious excavations made in the new levee at Hagan-avenue. Our reporter is informed that some days ago large quantities of earth were carried away for sale from that spot, and that in consequence the levee was so weakened as to be unable to withstand the pressure of the water. The avenue yesterday more resembled a bayou bankfull than any inundation we have seen. Many of the sufferers, and in fact a large majority, are in the humbler walks of life. They barely manage to make the ends meet under the most auspicious circumstances, but in the present dire extremety how they will get along heaven only knows.

"Reaching the reporter descended through one of the streets running parallel to the river, between Hagan-avenue and Claiborne-street, and everywhere found frightened women and children seeking the highest places attainable. Many of them had constructed rafts of the fencing, bridges, and seated themselves on chairs in front of their dwellings. Those fortunate enough to live in two-story houses crowded the upper floors, and not a few cottagers sought a refuge on the roof. Police boats, nearly all of which carried from fifty to one hundred loaves of bread piled to land fro among the sufferers, distributing food. Early in the morning officers were dispatched to the different bakeries, with directions to purchase all the bread that could be spared. The majority of the bakers had only sufficient to supply their customers, and all the workmen were absent, but by a careful collection perhaps a thousand loaves were secured, and by 8 o'clock they were all distributed. Perhaps twenty boats in all were engaged in this benevolent service, and many families were not only prevented from famishing, but removed by them to places of refuge.

"LATER.—Upon all the streets leading to the lake up to 3 o'clock last evening the rise of waters appeared to have reached their maximum. At 10 P. M. however, they had nearly ceased. Upon Canal-street the water covered the crosswalks, and ripples up to Franklin-street, the gutters being swollen beyond Rampart. Upon Common-street it was still running up and disembarking passengers in front of St. Joseph's Church, the water washing up to Basin-street, which appeared to be the limits reached between the new and old basins. But the people were to be seen about the [illegible] of the invading sea, and fugitives collected [illegible] thus exhibiting a confidence in the [illegible] over. THE ILLINOIS TORNADO.

A Current of Fire-Charged Air Sweeps Over Mason County—Singular Effects of the Phenomenon.

A correspondent of the Springfield (Ill.) Journal, who visited Mason County on Saturday, furnishes the subjoined particulars of the strange effects of the tornado which swept over that region on the day previous:

The strange spectacle was witnessed by hundreds of the residents of Mason City and vicinity, and carried consternation to many strong hearts, and almost frightened out of their wits and lives many timid men, women, and children.

This fearful and wonderful exhibition of the elements took place on Friday morning last. The facts, as we have collected them from eye witnesses of the startling phenomenon, and from those who have since passed along the entire track of the tornado and observed with careful attention its most singular and destructive work, are as follows: The first trace of the tornado is found some six miles west of Mason City. On Friday morning, while the air was intensely hot, and to the west and south-west of Mason City, black clouds were visible, and to the north-west a sam cloud could be seen about six miles away, a dark, inky-hued, fearful-looking cloud or column was seen by the citizens of Mason City to darken at, and near the earth's surface, about six miles distant, as a wide extended prairie.

Gradually the terrible looking cloud column increased in breadth and in height, and seemed to be moving slowly and directly toward Mason City. Soon from this great, black, smoky-looking column, the base of which rested on the earth, there appeared distinct and well-defined, narrow and spire-like columns, which continued to extend rapidly until they reached and seemed to attach themselves finally to a passing cloud above. The frightful spectacle continued to move eastward, slowly but constantly, for some fifteen minutes, then changed its course slightly to the south-east, and, to the great joy of the people of Mason City, who were expecting to see their beautiful town torn to pieces by the angry elements. For some fifteen minutes longer the dreadful apparition moved slowly on, changing its shape considerably as it progressed. In its onward course the two outer spiraline columns disappeared, leaving the funnel column in the great black cloud below, and still attaching itself to the cloud above. Suddenly the awful apparition disappeared, as if it had been but a vision or dream, and, not a fearful reality. While the black column was moving, a cold current of air, was most sensibly felt from the track; an odor much like that of burning sulphur was inhaled by several persons. A gentleman who had been a soldier, and very often in battle, stood but a hundred yards from the tornado when it passed. He says that small blaces or flashes of electricity were constantly visible in the columns from the earth to the clouds above, and that quick, crackling popping sounds were heard, reminding him most forcibly of say, 1,000 infantry in battle, loading and firing their muskets as fast as possible.

As fearful as was the appearance of this dark, black, smoky column or columns, reeling upon the earth and rushing on and taking fast hold in the clouds of heaven, more marvelous, if possible, was its destructive work along its track upon the earth. In its pathway, which is near three miles in length, and varying in width from twenty to eighty feet, not a blade of grass, not a stalk of corn or wheat, not a shrub—do, not a particle of vegetation, was left alive. In the pathway of this tornado, as it did on Sodom, the destruction of every living thing of the vegetable kingdom could not have been more complete. For some distance in its path the earth was literally plowed up for six inches in depth. In leaving the prairie, six miles from Mason City, just a mile away, its energy was so rapid that even the rotary motion of the wind of the tornado that the earth was gathered up from about the deep roots of the prairie grass, and the grass with its bare roots as clean as if they had been washed, was lifted from the earth and left distant in the pathway of the tornado. Where the edge of the tornado had thrown its whole force every stalk of wheat standing in its path was torn down and twisted in every conceivable shape; and where an osage orange hedge laid across its path the hedge bushes were twisted into shreds; but the strangest and most wonderful of all the strange phenomena connected with the tornado, was the fate of the fowls of the air. Air must have been intensely hot, as every leaf, every blade of grass, stalk of corn or wheat—every green thing in its path—was literally and totally scorched to death and dried to a crisp. The prairie grass along the storm's track, which was luxuriantly green before the tornado passed, presented the appearance of a fire had run upon its prairies in midwinter. The leaves of the hedge where the devastating tornado passed across it in its way, crumble as do the dead dry leaves of the forest after the blasting frost has done its work. The young corn which stood in its way is as dead and black as if a withering, scorching fire had passed through it.

Another astounding feature of this tornado was, that while its rotary motion must have been of inconceivably great velocity, its progressive motion was the slow pace of not above the rate of six miles an hour.

The outlines of its pathway were so well defined, that five feet from the outer line of total destruction, the protection of every kind, and a vestige of its effects could be seen. In fact, the outlines of its path of destruction were almost as clearly defined as that of a reaper's or mower's swath through the meadow or wheat field, and its work more complete. Fortunately no house stood in its line of march. It passed between two houses, one three and half miles north, and its onward movement was at so slow a pace that man or beast, if in its way, could easily escape. The progressive movement of tornadoes is usually at the rate of from thirty to sixty miles an hour; this one moving but six miles an hour is most singular. The path of tornadoes is usually a quarter of a mile in width; this was but twenty to eighty feet. Here is another unusual feature.

We have in our office now twigs from the hedge where the tornado passed, and tufts of grass taken from its path. They and every living green particle of vegetation in its course, wither and dry up from the effects of the tornado as quickly and completely as did the barren fig-tree when the Master's curse descended upon it. Was this withering of vegetation the result of heat? If so, how was that intense heat generated? Was it produced by the friction of the rapidly revolving air, or by electric effects? Or, as is suggested by one gentleman with whom we have conversed in reference to the matter, might it not have been the effect of intense cold instead of heat?

Peaches and Grain in New-Jersey.

From the Trenton Gazette, June 2.

We yesterday held a conversation with a gentleman who has traveled over a large portion of Mercer County during the past two weeks, and he informs us that the prospects of a large peach crop were never better. Grain also looks well. Of apples there will be a short crop; not sufficient attention is paid to trees, and that more apples are not gathered every season is due to the neglect of farmers. The dry weather will greatly interfere with the grass crop, still, from present appearances, a fair yield is predicted, except in unfavorable localities.

Return of Old Oregon Settlers to Maine.

From the Portland Oregonian, May 27.

Rev. ELEMAH WALKER and wife, who were married on the 8th of March, 1838, and started two days afterward across the Plains for Oregon, arrived from their home in Washington County last evening, to start by the steamer of today for a visit to their old home "way down in Maine," near Portland. Since they left the State of Maine, thirty-three years ago, they have raised a family of children, [illegible] the first boy born [illegible] parents in [illegible] children are [illegible] journey and [illegible] first time in [illegible] of century, to look upon their native home and renew the scenes of their childhood and [illegible] the friends of other days. Will they find in Maine, but whom else will they find to recognise of all the troops of boys and girls with whom they were play-fellows in the "long ago?" They expect to be absent three or four months at least, and possibly till October. The good wishes of all their friends here will go with them.

PERSONAL, POLITICAL AND GENERAL.

Goldsboro, N. C., promises to commence shipping peaches the last of next week.

The Wisconsin State Temperance Convention was a failure. There were only ten persons present, and they voted it inexpedient to nominate a State ticket.

A Brooklyn milk-cart improves on the usual legends of the carmen by bearing on its front, in large letters: "I never tell." Water suggestion!

Hon. LEWIS BARTHOLOMEW, of Pennsylvania, has declined to accept the Chairmanship of the Republican State Central Committee, by reason of pressing professional engagements.

How many months is it since the Democratic members of the Legislature of Indiana unanimously declared the Fifteenth Amendment to be null and void?

Judge THOMAS S. HARGREY, of Winchester, Va., has just written a long letter, which the Baltimore American publishes, in favor of the annexation of San Domingo.

A woman has been lecturing in a Minnesota village on "Corsets, Tobacco and Whisky," with such effect that every man in the town has left off wearing corsets, and most of the women have quit chewing tobacco and drinking whisky.

A pleasant sort of a lover in Posey County, Indiana, attempted to kill a young lady who had rejected him by pouring nitric acid into her ear while she slept, having effected an entrance into her chamber at dead of night by removing a portion of the flooring.

A Norwich man is very angry with his wife. He bought an India-rubber air bed. She didn't believe it was healthy to sleep on a mattress that was not ventilated, and so, during his absence, punched about fifty holes in it. That husband has lost his faith in woman's ingenuity.

A North Carolina paper tells a thrilling story of an attack on a fishing party by a bald eagle. The bird, it says, dew in great rage at one of the party, burying its talons in his arm. The party, after a short contest, broke its wing with their fishing-poles and captured him.

Boston has endured some cruel blows in its day and a survived them all, but despair will find it when it reads in a Washington journal this: "Boston seems to be wanting in dribbets, leaking of the bung of her incapacity, while only ruffled through the spigot of her self-importance."

Columbus, Ohio, has a decided sensation. The elements are: The theft of a large amount of jewelry from a banker's house by the lover of a servant girl in the family, his flight to Pittsburg, Penn., his arrest, confession and return, the recovery of the jewelry, his release for some mysterious reason, (and this is the point of the sensation,) and the payment of $800 reward to the detectives.

The Philadelphia Sunday Mercury denounces the act of its party State Convention in pretending to yield opposition to negro suffrage, saying that the superfluous and mendacious resolution adopted will not only disgust and drive off many Democrats, but prevent thousands of honest and independent Conservatives from voting with a party that has forged a lie to win an election.

Ballston also claims whatever glory there may be in a "cyclone." It was on Sunday last, when, as we read in the Journal, it was seen in a swamp about two miles west of the village, presenting precisely the appearance of an immense water-spout. In its passage over the swamp and across the fields it uprooted trees, tore down fences, and destroyed everything in its path.

A woman on the track waving her apron violently in the air. The engineer sees her just as he is about rounding a curve. The train is stopped in its swift rush toward destruction, and the rescued passengers learn that a huge mass of rock has fallen upon the track just in front of them. This is the brief story. The woman's name (all we know of it) is Mrs. FRANK, the time Thursday, June 1, and the locality, the Western Pennsylvania Railroad, in Armstrong County.

This story comes from Sharp Mountain, in Pennsylvania: Two young girls a few days ago left a smaller one, about four years old, alone under a tree for a short time, and on returning to the spot found the little one standing still and speechless—neither replying to their questions nor wishing to leave the spot. They finally carried her home against her will, where every question was asked and effort made to make her speak, but in vain, until they inquired if she had seen a snake, when she immediately went into convulsions, with which she has been afflicted at intervals ever since.

PATRICK DUFFY was sentenced, in St. Louis, on Monday, to be hanged for the murder of FREDERICK OSTERMEYER. Previously he said, in reply to the question of the Judge: "I am not guilty; I did not strike that blow, was not the man that killed him. I was of course no good friend of OSTERMEYER'S. He owed me $600. My niece was driven out of the house by him on a stormy night. He was the cause of her death, she having become abandoned through his means, and poisoned herself. If I had committed the crime, he deserved it for what he had done." Judge PARKER then pronounced the sentence, and DUFFY nodded his head and said: "That's all right; I'll face it like a man, if I have got to."

The eighteen acknowledged candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Maine, to whom the contest has been "narrowed down," are: Charles P. Kimball, William L. Putnam, Samuel J. Anderson, of Portland; Henry K. Bradbury, of Hollis; Caleb B. Ayer, of Cornish; Joseph Titcomb, of Kennebunk; Alonzo Gracelon, of Lewiston; J. W. Bradbury, Artemus Libbey, of Augusta; E. W. Farley, of New-Castle; Arno Wiswell, of Ellsworth; J. C. Talbot and George Walker, Machias; George B. Burns, of Calais; J. C. Madigan, of Houlton; Gorham L. Boynton, W. H. McCrillis and George W. Ladd, of Bangor.

A California paper gives an account of a wonderful cave near Calaveras, wherein, as it alleges, columns and pilasters, ornamented at their capitals with volutes and modillions, at irregular intervals enlist the visitor's attention; while fine representations of tapestry, cornice and fresco-work are engraved, and plainly visible, on its wall. Every form of stalactites imaginable dreopingly hang suspended, presenting all the variegated colors of the rainbow, and brilliantly sparkle from the pale light of a candle like a thousand diamonds, while a like proportion of stalagmite underneath, with their sugar-coated surfaces, are constantly presented to view. Here and there, it is added, are carelessly piled bruised and broken fragments of those appropriate emblems of Infinite Wisdom that have succumbed to the normal destructive qualities of man.

Hon. EDWARD I. GOLLADAY delivered a feeling and eloquent address at the decoration of the Confederate graves on the battle-field of Franklin, Tenn., Sunday, May 28, closing with the words: "May the hour come when the mourners all over the nation may bind up their stricken hearts in one common love! May we remember, in the glorious Lee, foremost of all the war, and greatest of all the great, [illegible] his virtue, and [illegible] that whoever [illegible] his record, [illegible] sentiments [illegible] uttered [illegible] example, let us decorate our dead, [illegible] flowers."

There are two men in Northampton, Mass., who ought to reel cheaper than if they had been parties to an election bet. One of them is the father of a young lady and the other is her father, and a few days ago the former told her that if she would lead the best cow he had from his home to that of her father, about half a mile distant, he would give her the cow. Her father promised to throw in a gold watch. The daughter accepted the foolish bantor, and was accordingly seen, as the local paper says, "in her usual elegant attire," leading the cow through the streets. Whether the feat, as it is called, has a tendency to add to that maidenly reserve in her which is so eminently characteristic of the young ladies of the present day, we are not advised.

The Boston Traveller is disposed to dispute the assertion that there is much more crime in the city than in the country, and that more of the country-bred children turn out well in life than of those reared in the city. It asserts that there are in the rural districts more of cold-blooded murders, more of daring robberies, than in the cities, and the perpetrators are almost always country-born, regard being had, of course, to the difference in population. It also asserts that there is a larger proportion of young men growing up with the purpose of getting a living without work, having no regular occupation, than there are in the city, and a larger proportion of girls in training for immoral lives; statements, which, we apprehend, will not be received without dispute.

It seems that the account of a terrible tragedy at Umpqua—embracing the alleged ravishing of a child and the lynching of the perpetrator—published several weeks since in telegrams from San Francisco, was untrue, in so much as relates to the fate of the accused man. It was stated that a mob, instead of hanging him, placed him in a canoe and sent him, in charge of an officer, out upon the river, and that as after a time the boat came back without the prisoner, it was inferred that he had been shot and thrown overboard. The man, who has since arrived in San Francisco, was half killed by the child's father, who unmercifully beat him, and he was then tried by the mob and sentenced to be taken across the river and severely whipped. He was taken out in a boat, after he and the "court" had taken drinks together, and was put ashore and suffered to make his way off. It is due to the man to add that he denies there was foundation for the charges made against him.

A pamphlet has been published by the Department of State giving some information in regard to the new medical remedy, Cundurango, a tree which is found chiefly in the south of Ecuador. How its peculiar virtues were discovered our Minister, E. RAMSEY WING, thus states: "The ignorant wife of an Indian laborer who had for some time suffered from an internal cancer, concluded, finally to administer eternal relief to him by the simple process of mixing poison in his food. The woman, it would seem, wished really to save her husband from his agony, feeling that his cure was impossible, and determined to administer a decoction of the leaves of the cundurango, which are said to be an active poison. Not finding the leaves at hand, she administered a decoction of the wood itself. To her surprise the man at once began to rally, and as her first attempt had failed she continued to dose him with the lotion from day to day in increasing quantities. As a result the man entirely recovered, and the matter becoming public, further tests have established the powers of the wood as a remedial agency."

A gentleman who has recently made a trip on a Florida steamer up the usually placed waters of the Ocklawaha, tells the story of a scene which, he says, made his hair stand on end. This it is in brief: Suddenly the steamer encountered a sea of alligators, floundering and splashing water in every direction. Before the speed of the little steamer could be checked, they found themselves in the midst of these terrible monsters. The passengers endeavored to drive them away by shouting, and the hands on board beat them with handspikes, yet they seemed more determined to obstruct the passage of the boat. Already three colored men had been devoured by these terrible monsters and others wounded. Several planks were torn from the hull, and the steamer was with difficulty kept from sinking. Just at this period relief came. A huge serpent appeared making his way from the lakes—the same, it is supposed, that was seen as "Devil's Elbow" last Fall. The alligators soon disappeared, following the sea-devil, or whatever you may call him, and such fighting never was witnessed. At a point below, where the river suddenly narrows, it soon became blocked with dead alligators and the water was red with blood.

AMONG THE PATAGONIANS.

A Singular Story of Shipwreck and Massacre—Adventures of a San Francisco Waif.

From the San Francisco Bulletin, May 31.

Three or four days ago, the schooner Hide Hinson arrived at this port, having on board JOSEPH LORRITZ, a young man who was reared in this city. Some time since an account of the loss of the British brig Proposito was published. The steamer Frances Louise sailed from Scotland last March for a South American port, and at one of them LORRITZ was engaged. The Captain, hearing of the loss of the Proposito, went to Punta Arenas, and there obtained arms, with which they started forth to avenge the murder of the officers and crew of the Proposito.

The Frances Louise set sail, and when off Port Gallant's cove it approached the Magellan Indians (20° 45' Lat., longitude 72°), saw two canoes and one European-built boat filled with natives, sailing from the shore toward them. The Captain had no doubt that these were the very same savages who had fallen in with the Proposito, and immediately prepared to receive them. The canoes approaching the vessel, he sent one of them down, sinking it and drowning all hands. The boat avoided the bows of the steamer and ran alongside; but in attempting to board, the natives were one and all killed. In the meantime the remaining canoe made its escape and returned to shore. The Frances Louise sailed on, but that night ran ashore and became a wreck.

The crew found no difficulty in getting to land, and buried themselves out night in removing provisions and other stores from the ship to a tent which they had erected on the beach. Just before dawn, while the seamen were coming up loaded from the edge of the water, preceded by a lantern, which the foremost man carried in his hand, they were suddenly set upon by a horde of savages, armed with spears, bows and arrows, rough hatchets, and stones. A desperate fight ensued. The sailors defended themselves with desperation, but, of course, without avail; two of them were killed on the spot, and the rest were overpowered.

LORRITZ ran for his life, but as he was burdened with his pea-jacket and soaked clothing, he stood very little chance with the savages. He was caught, tied, and laid on the ground. His companions were served in the same way. For three weeks they all remained in captivity, allowed to wander about with their captors during the day, tied at night, and fed on what LORRITZ called "blubber." At the end of these three weeks LORRITZ one night contrived to shuffle off his bonds. He crept down to the beach, got into one of the boats lying there, and put off into the channel, where next morning he was fortunate enough to fall in with the schooner Hydehinson, on board of which he came to this city three or four days ago. The fate of his companions, who he says were all Scotchmen, is unknown to him, and he is unable to tell more than the Christian name of the captain and crew. LORRITZ is about sixteen years of age, and appears to be straightforward. He is now living with his mother on Valencia and Sixteenth-streets.

Berries and Peaches from Delaware.

From the Wilmington Commercial, June 8.

The shipment of strawberries over the Delaware Railroad has about ceased, the season having been brought to a permature close by the drouth. Other berries are, however, beginning to be shipped in small quantities, inconsiderable shipments of whortleberries and raspberries having been made from stations down the Peninsula.

There has been some talk of late, to the effect that the yield of peaches would be much less than said at first expected, owing to the rapid falling off of the fruit. Careful inquiry among well-informed people, however, convinces us that the falling off has been no more than was anticipated, and that, notwithstanding the severe drouth, the yield will be very large. The prospect still is that there will be immense.

INDIAN OUTRAGES.

Recent Murders on the Texas Frontier—The Massacre Near Fort Griffin—Action of Gen. Sherman.

From the Sherman (Grayson County, Texas) Patriot, May 27.

Gen. SHERMAN'S visit to the frontier of Texas is likely to result in great good to our Western borders. Great pains have been taken by the settlers along the route to post him in regard to the Indian frontier outrages. At Jacksboro the people held a large meeting

[illegible] Room paid a small interest to have their balances carried over, which is quite a change from receiving, as they did on Tuesday, as much as ¼ ⅌ cent. a day for the use of Gold. The case in the Cash Gold has not improved the demand for Exchange, which rates 110 ⅌ cent. net on London 60 days ⅌ 100 ⅌ cent. less a brokerage. The export demand for Gold is consequently light. The Customs demand averages nearly half a million of dollars per day this week.

On the Stock Exchange the offerings of the public Funds continue very inconsiderable. The whole registered business at the Board is only $28,000, and quite as little was doing at the counters of the principal dealers on the Street. It is not surprising that holders of United States 5-20s and other Funds of the United States should decline to sacrifice their Bonds at any price, while there is nothing so perfectly safe offering in substitution, as an investment, and the employment of Money on temporary loan is so dull and cheap as at present. The Southern State Bonds and the Pacific Railroad Bonds rule quite steady, but there is nothing like general speculation in either class of Stocks. The Land Grants of the Union Pacific sold at 85¼ ⅌ cent. The Railway Share speculation is still unsettled, after the disappointments of yesterday in regard to Lake Shore and Rock Island, which Stocks had been the main stay of the market for a week or ten days. Lake Shore sold down to 112¼ ⅌ cent., and then rallied to 113¼ ⅌ cent. Rock Island sold largely at 121, and subsequently recovered to 121¼@121½ ⅌ cent. The Hannibal and St. Joseph Stocks gave way to 38¼ for the Common and 92½ for the Preferred. The North-wests, Union Pacific, St. Paula, and New-York Centrals were reasonably steady, the Delaware and Lackawanna sold below 108 ⅌ cent. In the Miscellaneous list, Consolidated Coal of Maryland was 1 ⅌ cent. lower. There was nothing done in Western Telegraph. It is announced that the Company have applied their surplus means to reducing the Capital Stock, by purchase of their shares, at low figures, so that the present capital is only $35,000,000, in place of $41,000,000. The profits, net of their Fiscal Year ending June 1, (inst.) is $9,547,000, which after 7 ⅌ cent. interest on a debt of $4,000,000, would seem to leave a little over 6 ⅌ cent. on the reduced Capital.

The Atlantic and Pacific Company—Messrs. J. & W. Seligman & Co., of New-York, Bankers—have bought $1,500,000 of Land Grant 6 ⅌ cent. (Gold Interest) Mortgage Bonds, the lands being within the State of Missouri, at 80 ⅌ cent., or 77 ⅌ cent. ex July Coupon. This sum is all that remains of the original mortgage of $3,000,000 on 500,000 acres of Land. The subscription to the Loan was opened today, and must be closed, under arrangement with the Bankers of the Company on or before July 1, and the terms of the Loan certainly appear most tempting. See advertisement of Messrs. Seligman.

A notice appears in our advertising columns to the Bondholders of the Memphis and Little Rock Road to fund their Coupons of November, 1870, May and November, 1871, and May, 1872, pursuant to an agreement heretofore entered into between the Company and the Mortgagees. The funding can be made, by Eastern holders of the Bonds, at the Bank of Commerce in this City.

The week's imports of foreign dry goods have been to the specie value of $1,618,628; amount marketed, $1,256,028.

The principal and interest are exempt from the payment of all Taxes or Duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form, by or under State, municipal or local authority.

WASHINGTON, ..., 18....

Entered..... Recorded.....

..... Register of the Treasury.

Registered Bonds will be issued of the denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000, and coupon bonds of each denomination except the last two. The interest will be payable in the United States, at the office of the Treasurer any Assistant Treasurer, or designated depository of the Government, quarterly, on the first days of February, May, August, and November, in each year.

The interest on the Registered Stock of this Loan, it is determined by the Treasury Department, will be paid under the following convenient regulations, thus bringing a Gold Check for the Quarterly Interest, to the Post-office of every holder, free of trouble or expense, dispensing with attendance, in person or by proxy, at the Treasury, for the purpose of recepting for and drawing such interest.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, LOAN DIVISION, May 15, 1871.

It has been determined by the Department to pay the interest on the registered stock of the new Loans, falls due on the 14 (Sun. 20, 1871,) by check, to the order of the party in whose name the stock is registered, and the check will be transmitted by mail to the address of the holder, when furnished, otherwise to the agent sent to the care of the Assistant Treasurer or depositary where the bond is held.

It is requested, in order to enable the Department to transmit these checks by mail, that all parties subscribing for the new Loan, or having transfers made to them, will furnish their post-office address, and advise the Department of any change, at least fifteen days before interest days.

During the fifteen days immediately preceding the interest days, Feb. 1, May 1, Aug. 1 and Nov. 1, the transfer-books will be closed for the purpose of preparing the checks. If the stock is not presented for transfer previous to the closing, the interest will be paid to the person to whom the transferred certificate was issued, and the assignee must look to that party for the accrued interest to which he may be entitled.

The new certificate issued upon a transfer of stock will bear interest from the first day of the quarter year in which such transfer is made, and will invariably be returned to the party who forwarded the assigned certificates by mail, unless otherwise directed.

Checks issued in payment of interest will bear the following indorsement: "This check is payable on presentation, properly indorsed, at the Office of the Treasurer at Washington, the Assistant Treasurer at Boston, New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Charleston, New-Orleans, St. Louis, San Francisco, or the designated depositary at Dubuque, Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, Mobile, or Pittsburg.

"Should such checks be returned to the Department as "unclaimed for," they will be held by the Treasurer of the United States, subject to the order of the payee.

GEO. S. BOUTWELL, Secretary.

The whole proceeds of the New Loan will be applied to the payment or redemption and cancellation of the 5-20 years six per cent. bonds, and in addition to these proceeds, the 5-20s are being reduced by purchases, averaging, for two years past, about $10,000,000 per month.

The entire effect, therefore, of the New Loan, in connection with the existing Sinking Fund process of the Treasury, is to reduce both Principal and Interest of the Public Debt of the United States. The Loan creates no additional supply of Government Stocks, while the application of the surplus revenue is constantly lessening the Funded Stocks bearing six per cent. Gold Interest.

The policy of the Government since the close of the War in 1865, which left a debt upon the country of $2,755,000,000, and an annual taxation of $311,000,000, has been to reduce steadily both Debt and Taxes; to reduce the Principal of the Debt by actual payments, and to lessen the annual burden of Interest, and thereby the burden of Taxation, not only through such payments, but by funding the debt at the cheapest rates of interest practicable from time to time, until it is now felt that the very cheapest rates are due to the high Credit, unblemished Public Faith, and vast and growing resources of the country. From $2,755,000,000 the Principal of the Debt has been reduced to $2,200,000,000—both Isums exclusive of accrued interest—and from the heavy burden of $151,859,000 per annum, the Interest charge has been reduced to $112,760,000 per annum; while the annual taxation, under the Internal Revenue system, which the necessities of the War and the Debt thereby created rendered necessary for at least a short series of years, has be an reduced from $311,000,000 in 1865-66 to about $154,000,000 per year in 1870-71, (estimating for the highest probable collections in the current month, the last of the Fiscal year,) or less than one-half the first named sum. And in the year 1871-72 a further reduction of $38,000,000 will come in under the Act of July, 1870, so as to give only $116,000,000 for the year, or about two-fifths the maximum of 1865-66.

By the successful refunding of the Public Debt at moderate rates of Interest, and by continued economies in the expenditures of the Government—which in two years, from March 4, 1869, to March 4, 1871, amounted to $196,700,940, or an average saving per year of $63,850,474—it is believed that nearly the entire system of Internal Taxes can be dispensed with in a few years, or so much of it as requires the machinery of District Assessors and Collectors.

The Secretary of the Treasury has just published the Monthly Schedule of the Public Debt to June 1, from which it appears that he has further reduced the total of Funded Gold-bearing debt since May 1 by the sum of $3,000,000 by purchase of United States 5-20s for the Sinking Fund, and reduced the 5-20s by the further sum of $8,217,400 by conversion into the New 5 ⅌ Cents. The whole Funded Debt now stands, $1,894,128,750, as against $2,107,346,150 two years ago when the present Administration came into office. Adding to these sums the net Circulation of the Treasury, (that is, in Greenbacks and Greenback Certificates, after deducting Gold and Currency on hand,) the following is the comparison of Debt of all kinds, at present, and at the close of the War, and in 1869:

	July, 1871.	March, 1869.	June, 1871.
U. S. Stocks	$2,160,194,112	$2,107,346,150	$1,894,128,750
Circulation	356,371,160	356,540,954	356,326,097
Total	$2,516,565,272	$2,463,887,104	$2,250,454,753

The following table affords a classification of the Funded Stock (in Gold) of the United States, as at present outstanding:

Total March 4, 1869			$2,107,346,150
Reduction of Funded Debt			$192,555,450
Yearly Gold Interest charge, 1869			$134,265,297
Present yearly charge			111,616,906

By exchange of $500,000,000 United States six per cents for four and a half per cents of 1891	4,500,000
By exchange of $700,000,000 United States six per cents for four per cents of 1891	14,000,000

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

It is expected that the state of siege in Paris will cease on Monday. Arms are still found in large quantities concealed in cellars, churches and elsewhere. Offenders against the Government are to be tried by the Courts-martial as military, and not as political, prisoners. Gen. ROSSEL and M. COURBET have been arrested. It is said that Gen. L'ADMIRAULT will be Governor of Paris. The election for filling vacancies in the French Assembly are to be held on the 9th of July. Prince NAPOLEON will doubtless be a candidate for Corsica. The Orleans Princes promise not to take their seats during the existence of the present Assembly. The Minister of Finance has presented to the Assembly a bill providing for a loan of £100,000,000. He urged the prompt payment of the indemnity. The Westmeath bill, for the repression of violence in Ireland, passed the British House of Commons yesterday. Snow fell in Yorkshire, England, yesterday.

GENERAL.

The Homœopathic Convention adjourned yesterday to meet May 22, 1872, in Washington. Dr. TALBOT, of New-Jersey, was elected President; Dr. YOULIN, Vice-President; Dr. McCLATCHEY, General Secretary; Dr. E. M. KELLOGG, of New-York, Treasurer.

As RICHARD KERR was rowing four young girls in the upper level, at the Cohoes Mills, above Troy, on Thursday night, the boat upset, and one of the girls, MAGGIE McNUTT, was drowned. KERR saved one, Miss BELLE FRENCHON saved another, and Miss McNUTT and BERTHA REDWOOD went through a covered passage, or flume, 200 feet long. Miss REDWOOD survives, but is in a dangerous condition.

A dispatch from Fort Gibson, Indian Territory, states that Gen. SHERMAN was to leave there yesterday, and Fort Leavenworth on Saturday.

The General Synod of the Reformed Church is in session in Albany. The publications of the society for the past year were greatly in excess of previous years. The cash receipts were $30,688; the assets, $471,800, and the liabilities, $325,527.

A verdict of $2,500 damages was given yesterday in Boston against the New-York and New-Haven Railroad Company for injuries inflicted on JOHN A. COLMAN in putting him off a train.

Charlestown, Mass., is to celebrate the anniversary of Bunker Hill this year with unusual éclat.

The Olympics, of Philadelphia, were defeated yesterday by the White Stockings, of Chicago, by a score of 16 to 2.

A fire at Oakland, Livingston County, on Thursday night, destroyed the Presbyterian Church, a hotel and two dwellings.

Yesterday morning, CUTLER'S planing mill, WATSON & MASON'S pail factory, KENDRICK & BENJAMIN'S Novelty Works, LOOMIS'S turning shop, LASHER'S sash and blind factory, and VAN ALSTON'S paper mills, in Fulton, N. Y., were burned, involving a loss of about $55,000.

F. A. MAGAENNEY, Disbursing Clerk of the Post-office Department, was sent to an insane asylum yesterday. A defalcation of about $30,000 was found in his accounts.

The Polaris leaves Washington for New-York today, and is expected to start for the Arctic regions about the 20th inst.

The strike of laborers employed on the public works of Washington is altogether at an end, the men having resumed work at $1 50 per day.

The New-Hampshire Senate was still examining the election returns of some of its members, yesterday. The Democrats in the House are said to be determined to force a vote on Governor before the sick Republican members take their seats, but it is thought they will not succeed before next week.

Mr. WADE'S position in relation to the Ohio Republican State Convention is set forth in a letter from him published yesterday in Cincinnati. He says: "Should the Republican Convention consider that it is essential to succeed to retire me again into the field, I could not decline that leadership without seeming to desert, if not betray, a principle."

The International Typographical Union, yesterday, after a statement had been made in behalf of Columbia Union that they had never declined to force the mere question on the International Union, adopted a resolution that the Albany Convention did not intend to censure the Washington Union by the resolution passed in reference to L. F. DOUGLASS.

Mme. JOANNA MARIA GOVERDINA PENTERMANN, a native of Belgium, died on a western-bound emigrant train near Brady's Island, Nebraska, on Thursday night. About $10,000, mostly in United States bonds, were found on her person.

The Board of Steam-boat Inspectors met at Washington yesterday to draw up new rules in accordance with the law of the last session of Congress for the protection of life on steam vessels. It will probably take a month to complete the work.

The recent reports of hostile movements by the Indians of Montana are denied. An attack was made upon the Indians at Fort Berthold, Dakota, in the latter part of May, by some members of the Sioux tribe, but without serious results.

The City Debt—Another "Statement."

An evening paper publishes what it calls "an official statement of the public debt of the City and County of New-York as it stood upon the 1st day of May, 1871." This, we suppose, is the report of Controller CONNOLLY, which, after being kept back three years, the Post promised should be forthcoming on the 1st of April last. If what the Post publishes is the whole of the "report" which Mr. CONNOLLY intends to vouchsafe to the public, he might as well have kept it back three years longer, for all the information it contains concerning matters about which the people seek to be enlightened. It is but a grim satisfaction to be told that the City and County debt amounts to eighty-four millions of dollars, though that is a very different "statement" from the one made to the Connolly whitewashing Committee, on the eve of the last election. What the people want to know is, what has been done with the money? In a word, they want, and they intend to have at no distant day, a bona fide "report" of the transactions of the Controller's office during the last three years—such a report as the law requires, and such as used to be published quarterly before RICHARD B. CONNOLLY took possession of the office—a detailed report containing every item of money paid out of the City Treasury, when paid, to whom paid, and what for.

It is Mr. CONNOLLY'S misfortune, as well as his fault, that any report which he might publish at this late day would be looked upon with suspicion. He has so long kept the people in the dark about the transactions of his office; he has so persistently disregarded the plain letter of the law, as well as the appeals of the Press and of the people; he has resorted to such dishonorable subterfuge and deception for the purpose of whitewashing his official conduct, that a prima-facie case of fraud and malfeasance in office has already been made out against him in the public mind, and nothing but a thorough overhauling of his books and vouchers by an outside, disinterested party will ever remove this conviction. If Mr. CONNOLLY were an honest man he would court such an investigation—nay, he would have demanded it long ago.

But to return to this "official statement" in the Post. It purports to give a list of all the outstanding bonds against the City and County, with their amounts, and the dates at which they fall due—the dates of their issue being, for some reason, omitted. According to this "statement," the total funded debt of the City and County on the 1st of May ult., was $88,058,714, and the amount of securities in the hands of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund was $17,784,063—leaving the absolute indebtedness of the City and County, over and above its assets, $64,274,651. The first point that will strike the public in this new "statement" is its wide variation from the statement published last November over the signatures of Moses Taylor, E. D. Brown, J. J. Astor, George R. Sistare, Edward Schell and Marshall O. Roberts. Their statement, which claimed to have been made after a thorough examination of the books of the Finance Department, put the whole debt of the City and County at $69,005,498, and the securities of the Sinking Fund at $20,861,011—leaving the absolute indebtedness $48,044,487. They followed up this statement with the following triumphant flourish of their whitewashing brush: "At the rate at which the redemption of this debt has been provided for during the period of the office of the present Controller, the whole City debt, as above, will be extinguished in less than twelve years." Well, let us see. Since last November, according to those two statements, (both official,) the City and County debt has increased from $69,005,498 to $88,058,714, while the securities of the Sinking Fund have decreased from $20,861,011 to $17,784,063—leaving the actual indebtedness $18,680,163 greater than it was then. Now it may be that a debt which increases at the rate of more than thirty per cent. in seven months is in a fair way of being "extinguished in less than twelve years," but we doubt whether any accountant, who was not a professional whitewasher, would be able to figure out such a result. It is very certain that if the debt of New-York is extinguished in that time it can only be by repudiation.

But these figures, in the statement now put forth by "Slippery" DICK, widely as they differ from those of his November whitewashers, by no means represent the whole debt of the City as it will stand when the Albany legislation of last Winter is complied with. The present statement contains none of the items for which the bonds of the City are to be issued during the present Summer, and which will be added to the permanent debt of the City. These new items, a list of which we have heretofore published, amount in the aggregate to about thirty millions of dollars. This sum, added to the existing debt, as given in the Controller's statement, will make the total indebtedness of the City and County $112,058,714, for the extinguishment of which there is a balance of $17,784,063 in the hands of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund. It appears, then, that the real debt of New-York, over and above its assets in the Sinking Fund, is more than double the amount represented last Fall by ROBERTS, ASTOR & Co. This is on the supposition that the Controller has finally given us the facts—a somewhat rash supposition, we admit.

A People's Hunting-Ground.

At the recent Sportsmen's Convention in Utica, the following resolution was offered by Mr. C. E. WHITEHEAD, of this City:

Resolved, That in the opinion of this Convention, the forests of the Adirondacks, being a natural reserve for the recreation of the public, should be preserved by an act of the Legislature of the State, as a public forest, inalienable and indestructible forever, for the uses of the public.

This idea has been frequently presented by those familiar with the remarkable scenery in the northern portions of our State. There is, as our readers well know, a region of lakes and forests lying west of Lake Champlain, which, an island in the earliest geological periods, is still an island in the midst of modern civilization. No railroads, or canal, or turnpike traverses it; no steam-whistle is heard in all its borders; no boat for commerce or pleasure larger than a row-boat cuts the silent waters of its hundreds of lakes and streams. Here, alone in the Eastern States, the whirl of the factory or the hum of commerce is not heard. Around this enchanted island, the waves of business and the currents of traffic, and all the storm of the busy American world seem to beat in vain, leaving its sylvan solitudes and still lakes and ancient forests as peaceful and lovely as they were when the Pilgrims first landed.

On any modern map of railroads and cities "the Adirondacks" are still an island, as they were when the first Laurentian rocks rose slowly above the wilderness of waters which covered what is now the Continent of America. Into this island of forests have fled the game, whose congeners have been exterminated in the more settled portions of the Northern States. Here are more of the red deer of America than anywhere else this side of the Rocky Mountains, though these animals are destined soon to be exterminated even here, unless the sportsman's conventions, or other authorities, frame and secure the passage of more stringent laws protecting them from the present merciless slaughter. Here, too, in waters which the Indians well knew and frequented when our own region was a wilderness, the delicious brook and lake trout have congregated, and give the best sport for fly or trolling-line which any waters, except those of Maine, can offer.

But the most attractive feature of this whole region is its "divine" atmosphere. Whether owing to its altitude, or to the immense range of forest and swamp around it, and the consequent radiation, it is the coolest inland district in the Northern States, and the air has a singular purity and tonic in it. Travelers compare it to the atmosphere of the High Alps. August in the Adirondacks is like October on the sea-board. This region has two great divisions—one, the mountains proper, which are not very accessible to the ordinary traveling public; the other, the "lake country," lying to the west and north-west of the mountain barrier. It is the latter which is referred to in the resolution presented to the Sportsmen's Convention. This district would indeed make a superb people's park for all future centuries. At present, much of the wild land in it is hardly worth more than three dollars an acre. A vast territory, now perfectly useless for agricultural and other purposes, could be bought by the State for a comparatively small sum. If left to itself, it will soon be broken up by modern improvements, and the last hunting-ground, or place for general recreation for all, remaining in our State, will pass away.

The land reformers of England are struggling now to preserve the commons and forests of the Kingdom against the encroachments of private or regal owners, for the recreation of the people. Why should we not early, in this State, secure for all the future a people's hunting-ground and forest? It has been often noted, as a remarkable evidence of American civilization, that California should so early have set aside, for public use and enjoyment forever, a tract of such pure beauty and pleasure as the wonderful Yosemite Cañon. Probably no civilized State has done so wise and far-reaching an act. But the Yosemite Valley is difficult and expensive to reach for the Californians compared to the Adirondack Lake country in its access to the people of this State. Even from this City it is only a day and a half distant, with small traveling expense. And to people in the interior it is still more convenient.

If preserved, and carefully guarded by public foresters, it would remain the most delightful hunting and fishing ground for our youth ever offered in any country. Here, too, in these peaceful solitudes, the lovers of natural beauty would gather from every part of the State, to enjoy what is fast passing away, "the forest primeval," and lakes and streams unvexed by the keel of commerce. Here, the aged and the invalid would come to breathe pure air, and remain apart from the noise and hurry and business of American life. What princes and millionaires enjoy in the Old World—their own solitudes and undisturbed forests and preserves—would here be offered to the people, without price or condition, except an observance of the laws. Will not the country Press, and the Sportsmen's Conventions and their organs, recommend this measure of civilization untill it become law?

The Spring Meeting at Jerome Park.

With every prospect of fair weather to lend the crowning attraction—the only attraction for which its managers perforce rely on chance—and with a field of competitors probably never equaled at Jerome Park, the Spring Meeting of the Jockey Club begins today. We need scarcely recommend such of our readers as have the leisure, to attend it. Slowly, but surely, our Westchester race-track has won its way to public favor, and year after year has brought increased multitudes to participate in its novel pleasures. This, too, in the face of much ill-omened prophecy, and many popular prejudices. Racing is a sport opposed to all Northern habits, and especially opposed to our utilitarian convictions. In a country where riding is so infrequent and driving so universal, the racer must necessarily be regarded only as a costly and useless luxury, while the trotting horse receives all care and cultivation. But, precisely for this reason, because we believe it may tend to encourage so peaceful a pastime, and so healthful an exercise as riding, do we believe the race-track worthy of encouragement, especially when conducted under such unexceptionable auspices as have always controlled Jerome Park.

Doubtless, the influence of these races has been strong in just the direction we have indicated. If more and better riders are to be seen in our streets today than ten years ago, the improvement may be traced, in no slight degree to the stimulus given by the meetings of the Jockey Club. But apart from this benefit, the originators of this enterprise have many claims upon our gratitude. If only because they have given excuse for a few additional holidays to a community overworked and sadly in need of them, they have merited thanks and substantial support. The recreation they offer, moreover, has every accessory which can render it attractive and invigorating. The drive through the Summer beauties of Central Park, and the fresh green lanes of Westchester in the perfect June weather, is alone a sufficient delight. In the surroundings and incidents of the course itself, the gayety and animation of the crowd, the shifting kaleidoscope of bright colors and pretty faces, the inspiration of happiness from the sight of thousands of happy people, the music, the fresh air and the sunshine, the excitement of the brief contests—all these are elements of a rare and varied enjoyment, such as sends the jaded worker back with a fresher heart to his labors.

From most of the evil associations which usually hedge round a race-track, Jerome Park is singularly free. Disreputable persons are to be met there, as they are to be met in any place of public resort. But they are kept within proper and rigid limits—one must, indeed, look for them to find them. From the Grand Stand and the Club-house such persons are carefully excluded, and ladies may, and do, go to the track with even greater security than to opera or ball. Betting may go on, but betting there is everywhere, and this, too, at the Park is mostly confined to the mystic circle that gathers about the quarter-stretch and the pool-stand. And, so far as the races themselves are concerned, we do not know that their absolute fairness has ever been questioned. In every respect, Jerome Park may compare more than favorably with the most famous English race-tracks, and, indeed, bids fair before long to be the sole heir of their vanished glories. All accounts represent that the popular interest in the sport is dying out in its very fatherland, and the reason is generally traced to the corruption and scandalous "jockeying" that have of late years tarnished the record of the English turf. The management at Jerome Park have won popularity and confidence by a strict adherence to fair dealing. We trust there will never be occasion to reverse the flattering and honorable verdict of the public.

The racing today will comprise a handicap, and a two-mile race for all ages, the Belmont stakes for three-year olds, and a steeple-chase, which is always a picturesque and attractive sight, and for which it is hoped an exceptionally fine field will start. But the main interest of the day will centre in the Belmont Stakes, for which there are unusually many entries. If Harry Bassett, a new name at the Park, does not sadly belie all that is said of him, and has equally worthy competitors, a capital race may be expected.

A Privileged Class.

The unexpected outburst of public feeling elicited by the Foster case, seems to have had a gratifying effect on our car conductors. Drunken men are now put off the cars with astonishing frequency, and we are even encouraged to hope for the time when gross language and offensive conduct shall be as little tolerated as drunkenness on our public conveyances. The right of decent passengers to protection from this sort of annoyance, is, however, still left in abeyance. The Police Commissioners have apparently been too much occupied to settle the last case presented to them by the Fourth-avenue Railroad Company. Conductors are thus still left in doubt as to whether ladies and gentlemen have any sensibilities which foul-mouthed rowdies are bound to respect. It is desirable that this point should be decided as speedily as possible. Mayor HALL'S plan of suppressing disorder on the street cars by "dead-heading" policemen, will do little practical good to the community, if those excellent free-riders are to be, after all, powerless to prevent one of the most disgusting and offensive phases of ruffianism. As between the harmless sot who has fuddled himself into stupor, and the sober, swaggering "Ring" politician, who poisons the air with his blasphemy, most people compelled to choose an undesirable fellow-passenger would prefer the former.

But for this inconsistency of the Police authorities the conductors are not responsible. In other respects they really appear to have been striving of late to do their duty, as they understand it. But it seems there is a class of men before whose dignity their authority abases itself, and their resolution vanishes into thin air. At least so much is to be inferred from an item in our local column of yesterday, which we trust Sheriff BRENNAN perused with interest. He need not have paused to ask if the story be true; there is a sad verisimilitude about it which at once enforces conviction. Lest, however, he may have overlooked it, we will repeat it here for his edification. On a Third-avenue car, the other evening, the conductor's attention was called to two drunken fellows on the rear platform, who had for some time been making themselves obnoxious by their loud ribaldry and insulting familiarities to women getting on and off the car. But the conductor replied to the appeal, with an awe-struck air, that the more drunken and scurrilous one of the two was a Deputy Sheriff, and entitled by virtue of his position to say and do whatever he pleased. This representation was not to be gainsaid by any one possessing the slightest knowledge of New-York politics, and the genial Deputy Sheriff and his jovial comrade continued their pleasant pastime of blasphemy, and insulting women, to their heart's content.

The conductor's notion of the powers of a Deputy Sheriff was very little exaggerated, either in point of theory or practice. If that official is not above the law, he believes himself to be, and a large part of the community believe him to be, and that amounts to very much the same in theory. A Deputy Sheriff is to a City Marshal, in point of irresponsibility and defiance of law, as a Tweed, let us say, to a Connolly. So widespread is the popular belief in the inviolateness attaching to this particular office, that numbers of the class of amateur blackguards variously known among their congeners as "sports," or "bloods," or "young men about town," annually get themselves made special Deputy Sheriffs, for the sake of the immunity in scoundrelism which the dignity is supposed to afford. These things can hardly be known to Sheriff BRENNAN, who is a man indefatigable in the exercise of his duties.

Immigration and its Causes.

Everybody admits that we owe no inconsiderable portion of our prosperity and rapid development to foreign immigration. The rapid growth of the Pacific coast has been remarkable, but the population of the States west of the Sierras was drawn, for the most part, from the older States. The West and more especially the North-western States, attest the value of immigration. During the decade just passed there was a considerable decrease in the number of arrivals. The causes for this, both in this country and Europe, are now happily removed. At the beginning of the decade our own war, and in the last year of it the war in Europe, operated against large immigration. Those who have made the subject a special study predict that in the present decade the increase of population from foreign immigration will far surpass that of any former period. Emigration from Ireland has reached its maximum, and will, without doubt, show, in the next ten years, a considerable decline. This will, however, be more than counterbalanced by the increase from Germany, and in addition the people of other countries from which immigration has heretofore been small will be attracted to the United States by the certainty of bettering their condition. The immigration from Sweden and Norway in the last decade is worthy of attention as illustrating how rapidly the increase will be from any country so soon as the superior advantages of the United States come to be known. In the decade ending with the year 1860, immigration from Sweden and Norway was but 20,931; in the decade ending with the year 1870, it increased to 117,799. This large immigration sought the North-western States, adding to the wealth, and aiding in the rapid increase of population, which bids fair to give to this section a preponderating influence in directing the affairs of the nation.

The Southern States, relieved from the burden of slavery, are now seeking to develop their resources by encouraging immigration. They have learned the secret of the success of the Northern and Western States, and are resolved to profit by it. Lands are abundant and cheap, and a large portion of them capable of cultivation; the climate is desirable and the products varied; water and timber are abundant and the markets are easy of access. Agents of different States are now in Europe for the purpose of bringing the advantages of the country to the attention of intending immigrants. But as these agents represent a particular interest, their representations of the superior advantages South will not be implicitly believed. Large grants of land have been made by the Government to certain railroads, and these also have agents in Europe, but their representations are open to the same objection as those made by agents of the Southern States, and the immigrant, while listening to each and comparing their statements, will, as heretofore, rely on the information contained in the letters of his countrymen who have made homes for themselves in the West.

Our laws favor immigration, but the peoples of other countries require a knowledge of them. Little care has hitherto been taken to give the immigrant information with regard to the resources of the different sections of the country. The skilled workman knew that he must remain in or near the large cities and manufacturing towns, and the agricultural laborer, having a small sum to invest in land, or seeking employment, that he must "go West." The special report of Mr. EDWARD YOUNG, Chief of the Bureau of Statistics, just published, will afford the immigrant all needful information. With infinite labor, a large mass of statistics relative to the agricultural advantages of each State, and the wages of labor, skilled and unskilled, in different sections, has been collected and arranged. It is indeed the immigrant's hand-book, and will be found equally valuable to the foreign immigrant and to the citizens of the older States who contemplate removing to a newer country. The price of land, its nearness and accessibility to market, the kind of produce and its market value, the nature of soil, cost of stock, wages of skilled and unskilled labor, and many other valuable data are given, which will enable the immigrant to contrast the advantages offered by different sections, and to decide in advance of embarkation where he will settle—thus saving him much time, anxiety, and expense. This work, which is published by the authority of the Government, will exercise an important influence in determining the future direction of immigration, and it brings into notice many regions which are at present almost unknown to the foreign workman or agriculturist.

MINOR TOPICS.

The Opinion Nationale warns the French people that they are stumbling toward another monarchy. That is undoubtedly where M. THIERS' policy has a tendency to land them, but it is to be observed that a good number of Bonapartist candidates are about to "run" for the Assembly, and this will give some indication of the temper of the constituencies toward the dethroned Emperor. Among these candidates appears the name of M. HAUSSMANN, who would doubtless like to try his hand again at improving Paris. It would tax his skill to restore the capital to the condition in which it stood before his late master plunged the country into war. The ORLEANS Princes have promised not to take their seats in the present Assembly. They may not be deficient in courage, and yet not be over eager to trust themselves in Paris until the volcanic forces are spent.

Among other evidence adduced on the Tichborne trial since we last called the attention of the public to it, is that of a highly-respectable surgeon, Dr. LEFCOURTE. He attended the lost ROGER TICHBORNE before his departure for South America. When he saw the man who now claims to be Sir ROGER, he recognized him, and was reminded that he had once treated him (Sir ROGER) for a relaxed sore throat. The doctor denied it. "Yes, you did," said the claimant, "I remember you painting that nasty stuff (caustic) down my throat; I can taste it yet." The doctor went home and referred to his books, and found that the claimant was quite right. Such incidents as this certainly make it extremely hard to believe that the claimant is an impostor. How was anybody but the real ROGER to know of so slight a circumstance as a doctor attending him for a sore throat nearly twenty years ago? An old servant of the TICHBORNE family deposed that the missing ROGER had, when a boy, one knee rather larger than the other. He had examined the present claimant, and found the same peculiarity in him—moreover, he recognized him by many other signs. Some of these witnesses contradicted themselves about dates, and also contradicted their own affidavits, made months ago—but the theory that they are all in a vast conspiracy is decidedly harder to believe than that the claimant is the real Sir ROGER. However, the other side has yet to be heard.

The London Post has joined the thin ranks of those who oppose the Treaty of Washington. Its special complaint is as follows: "If once the principle is solemnly affirmed that acts are to be judged by rules subsequently made to fit them, international law at once becomes a chaos; no country will know what its duties are to any other country." At the close of every war, acts are judged by rules made subsequent to their commission, just in proportion as the war is decisive. The enforcement of such rules is the object of war. How much better, then, when the true interests of two great nations required the adoption of rules partially new to one of them, that they should be acknowledged and applied without war. That such a result is possible in our day is one of the greatest, we may perhaps say the very greatest, achievement of modern civilization.

We find in an evening paper a renewal of some of the arguments long since predicated in the TIMES for the union of Brooklyn and New-York, under a common Municipal Government. At present the two cities are maintaining two distinct swarms of political flies, but they are of a common stock. Within five years, Brooklyn ringleaders have formed close partnership with those of New-York, and have striven for the most accurate imitation possible of their illustrious prototypes on this side of the river. The great bridge will be a tie to bind the two cities in more senses than one. Its erection was made possible by the municipal subscription of New-York to its capital stock, and since, on its completion, there will be every reason why the two cities should be one, the mere pride of maintaining its separate political machine ought not to prevent the consolidation finding favor in the eyes of Brooklynites.

The Mormons refuse to pay the expenses of the United States Courts, and the lawyers have compromised by an arrangement to divide the expense of jury fees in civil cases between their clients. It remains to be seen how far a portion of the community, which commences by repudiating the ordinary expenses of Court, can be made to respond to damages decreed by the Courts they refuse to support. It is not impossible that this question may yet provoke that conflict with Mormon stubbornness which appears to a certain extent inevitable.

We discussed the other day the subject of narrow-gauge railways. There can be no doubt that this question is rising into importance among us, and reaching its solution in a very practical way. It now looks as if Connecticut enterprise would be accredited with the prompt acceptance of the new system, for on last Wednesday the Legislative Railroad Committee of that State had before it a petitioner for a narrow-gauge railroad from Hartford to Unionville. According to the engineer's estimates, this projected road is to be fifteen miles long, and to have a gauge of two and a half feet. The road-bed is estimated at ten feet where there are excavations, and eight feet where embankments are necessary. It is expected that the road will be built for $125,000, or less than ten thousand dollars a mile. The promoters of the enterprise press the project with reference to the great additional freighting facilities it will afford the people of that district. No opposition to the petition has yet been made, and as it is an experiment which can neither cost the State anything, nor invade the rights of existing railroad monopolies, there is no good reason why the narrow-gauge problem should not be worked out in Connecticut—that cradle of invention and enterprise.

At the Homœopathic Convention in Philadelphia, three ladies were admitted members of the Homœopathic Institute. The question presented itself not exactly on its merits, but in the form of a disputed point in the construction of the constitution of the Society. The ladies admitted are graduates of three medical schools, and are recommended each by three physicians, several of whose names are widely and favorably known. The practice of this school of medicine seems to have been more freely opened to ladies than that of the allopathic school, and, with the inevitable percentage of failures, some creditable successes are recorded in it.

Five thousand additional head of mixed cattle and 3,000 beeves arrived at Abilene, Kan., yesterday. One hundred and thirty-two thousand head of Texas cattle are now within a radius of twenty-five miles of Abilene.

WASHINGTON.

Meeting of Steam-boat Inspectors—New Rules to be Devised for the Protection of Life—Investigation of the Condition of the South—An Income Tax—Mr. Aucoucher's Bill a Bad Way—End of the Strike.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The full Board of Steam-boat Inspectors has now come together, the seven today, for the first time, having all the members present. The work before the Board requires of its members great special and scientific knowledge, patient labor, investigation and study. There are two classes of rules to be prepared, one for the guidance of officers of steam-boats, which will be a revision to conform to the new law of the rules which are compulsorily posted in all steam-boats, and the class of rules for the inspectors of steam vessels. The new law makes many and important changes from the old. In the first place it more thoroughly organizes the Board of Inspectors by the creation of the office of Inspector-General. One other change is the imposition of heavy penalties for the violation of the rules to be made by the Board, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Heretofore a violation of these rules was punishable only by dismissal from office. The new law was considered by the Board of Inspectors, at their last annual Convention, before its passage by Congress, and many of its provisions are in accordance with their suggestions. The Board holds its sessions in a large room in the Ebbitt House, which they have already strewed with models of vessels and steam-boat machinery of various kinds. The members of the Board are practical steam-boat men, and have been engaged in constructing steam machinery or in the running or building of vessels for years. The new law contains about eighty sections, embracing many hundred subjects which must be covered in the rules, and if the Board should consume its labors in a month, it will be only by exceedingly hard work, not interrupted by interminous notice. The rules which is established must be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury before they become operative.

CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

The circular of the Committee to inquire into the condition of the late insurrectionary States, which were addressed to Governors of the Southern States, were designed to elicit information as to the debts and the rates, amounts and subjects of taxation of those States at the present time, and copies of the laws creating those debts and fixing the rates of taxation are also requested, if they can be obtained, of the amounts of debts of the States at the time the ordinances of secession were passed, and also of the amounts, rates and subjects of taxation prior to the secession ordinances, with the valuation of slaves where they were taxed. Copies of the Election laws now in force, and those which have been in force since the adoption of the present Constitutions, are also called for. All but one or two of the Governors to whom the circulars were sent have replied. In some instances quite full statements have been enclosed and returned, but in others the Commissioners have simply received piles of books and printed documents, accompanied by a note saying they contained the information sought. The Committee will have a compilation of this information prepared, so that a comparative view of the facts can be taken. It begins to be talked now that the Subcommittee will extend its session all through the Summer, instead of only to the end of this month, as was first proposed.

PROPRIETY DOORS.

The great bronze doors that have stood between the rotunda in the Capitol and the Representatives Hall, are now lying on some wooden blocks in the rotunda and surrounded with rough wooden fences, awaiting the necessary preparations for putting them in the positions they are hereafter to occupy.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

AN INCOME DEFAULTER.

It was announced this morning that F. A. MAGAENNEY, who was widely known and much esteemed, had lost his reason and had been conveyed to an insane asylum for treatment. Later in the day new excitement was created by the report that much confusion had been discovered in his accounts as disbursing officer of the Post-office Department. Postmaster-General CREWELL was first informed of this state of accounts on Friday last and immediately commenced an investigation of the matter, and although he has not yet ascertained the exact amount due the Government, it is thought the deficit will not vary from $30,000. MAGAENNEY on being interrogated by the Postmaster-General acknowledged the deficit, saying it was caused by blending public and private business, and by speculating in water power and a marble quarry at and above Harper's Ferry. MAGAENNEY told the Postmaster-General that he did not know the precise amount he had invested in these enterprises, but he assigned the amount, whatever it may be, with his other effects to the sureties on his bonds. In the Department of Justice, which is investigating the subject, it is the opinion that the Government will not lose anything. MAGAENNEY is a man of education and culture, a good writer and successively filled editorial positions on the Morning Chronicle, National Intelligencer and Washington Express. In 1858 he was appointed disbursing officer of the Post-office Department, by Mr. CREWELL, who had unbounded confidence in his integrity. For a year or two MAGAENNEY has been in very bad health, suffering from consumption. He has only lately realized that he must die with that disease. His wife also is in bad health, and this, with his own continued illness, greatly impaired his mental faculties. MAGAENNEY'S friends complain that the term defalcation is applied to the confusion, as they allege, of public and private property and funds, and when it is admitted that nothing is lost, and when the fact of insanity would necessarily involve a derangement of business, the fact is recalled that E. H. CHEWELL, MAGAENNEY'S immediate predecessor, as disbursing agent, was discovered to be a defaulter to the amount of $62,000. His losses appeared to result from aberration of the mind, produced, it was stated, by the excessive use of opium.

END OF THE STRIKE.

Work was very generally resumed by the laborers today, and nothing can be heard of a strike or a striker anywhere. Not a man among those employed at the various points throughout the district, on public or private work, had anything to do with a strike. The laborers, white and colored, are each receiving $1 50 a day.

APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

The following appointments have been confirmed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Marquette, Mich.—GEO. FERRIMAN, Inspector of Hulls; THOS. C. FITZGERALD, Inspector of Boilers. Huron, Mich.—JOHN S. BOTSFORD, Inspector of Hulls; ASA B. COLE, Inspector of Boilers.

OFFICIAL CHANGES IN THE NAVY.

Rear-Admiral L. M. GOLDSBOROUGH, in command of the Washington Navy-yard, will be placed on the retired list on the 1st of July, but will probably remain in command of the Yard, as the order of the Secretary, issued above a year ago, forbidding retired officers from holding active commands, has been rescinded. Rear-Admiral S. W. GONON, now in New-York, retires on the 18th inst., when Commodore JAMES ALDEN, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, will be promoted in the grades of Rear-Admiral to fill the vacancy. The retirement of Admiral GOLDSBOROUGH on the 1st proximo promotes Commodore ALFRED TAYLOR to the rank of Rear-Admiral.

ABSENCE OF THE CHIEF-ENGINEER.

J. W. KING, Chief of the Bureau of Engineering, left Washington to-night for New-York, whence he will sail to-morrow for Europe on special duty connected with his bureau. Chief Engineer WILLIAM H. SHOCK has been detailed to perform the duties of the bureau in the absence of Mr. KING.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 8, 1871.

The day-journey from New-York to Washington, as one who has taken it many times, and paid his own mileage, is tedious to a degree. I doubt not the G. WASHINGTON family, who gave to it almost as many days as we give hours, found it far less irksome. There was, for them, always novelty and chance, if not excitement and adventure. The old yellow traveling chariot rocked high on easy, sleep-provoking springs, and old John never drove hard enough to raise a dust about the stagnant travelers.

As I neared the capital, on last Saturday night, dusty and hungry, every landmark was joyfully recognized. Even CLARK MILLS' bronze horse, which seems to have thrown its Jackson, and stands on the sculptor's pleasant country-place, a sign of his calling, or a monument reared to his own fame, though looking almost as awful in the moonlight as the marble shed of the Commendatore in "Don Giovanni," was hailed with something of the delight felt by the shipwrecked sailor, who, coming upon a gibbet, thanked God to find he was in a Christian land.

I returned from my little "scout" into the North, to find Washington life at a low ebb, the city absolutely drained of Congressmen and Commissioners, fashion and fun. We try not to grieve after Congress, knowing that it is a blessed change for them, that our loss is their gain, &c. We know, too, that if we are good, we shall meet them again, that the places which once knew them, shall know them once or twice more,—unless cadet-selling and bigamy become epidemic, and thin out their ranks; but for the departure of the High Commissioners, who shall console us? That is a dead loss. We had got so used to seeing Lords and Baronets about that we miss them wofully. The "High Jotuns" may live without the capital, but how will the "upper" live without the "High Jotuns?" It "grew by what it fed on."

The Senate went not a day too soon for the convenience of our excellent Sergeant-at-Arms. for he has not only the usual Summer house-cleaning on his hands, but important alterations to superintend, in that old, new, dilapidated, magnificent, cramped-up, stupendous building, which is at once our pride and despair. They are widening the doors in the old part; getting ready to let in the San Domingans, the Canadians, and the women. Mr. FRENCH, fortunately, may be free from some of a housekeeper's anxieties during the Summer vacation. His rich carpets, well-beaten, folded and laid away, are safe from the ravages of insects, having been, while on the floors, thoroughly saturated with the fluid extract of tobacco. Congress expects every man to do his duty toward its Hittites. The building has been kept so dry by much gas and anthracite, that nothing gets tarnished there, but reputations. It is the safest place for brass in the country; it is, in short, a place, where "neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where—" but I cannot conscientiously finish the sacred quotation.

As long as this incongruous building, this splendid failure, stands, there will be work to be done and undone upon it. I am constantly reminded, by its pressing confused and broken-up condition, of the architectural agonies and misfortunes of poor Bridget, as illustrated by JOHN RANDY. You know the wind, one night, blew a tile off the roof of Bridget's house. Bridget sends for a builder to repair the mischief. Builder persuades Bridget to undertake a little alteration in the edifice. In a week's time there isn't a habitable apartment left for poor Bridget to lodge in.

Work on the Capitol grounds is going on slowly, but surely. Let the people be easy about their money. I was absent some four weeks. When I left, a certain heap of dust and rubbish was being carted away, out of the sight of the "High Jotuns." When I returned, it was being carted back to the same spot.

Washington, in its dullest state, is never without its sensation. When I reached home, I was cast by the melancholy news of the conviction of Hon. C. C. BOWEN for bigamy. They say the scene in the Court was quite depressing, and that things looked a little serious for BOWEN, though Judge OLIN relieved the awkwardness and unpleasantness of the proceedings by his usual legal persiflage and judicial hilarity. He was as playful and agreeable as he could be under the circumstances,—it takes a murder trial to bring him out in all his wit and wisdom and graceful ease. He is thoroughly at home on the bench, and strives to make the prisoner as much so in the box. Poor BOWEN! He will be no longer beauin' about the girls, in his gay dual life, playing bachelor and benedict off and on. There is nothing left for him, it seems, but to "point a moral and adorn a tale," as the hero of a Wood-Braddon romance. What an illiberal country this is, to be sure! What do the privileges of his order amount to, for a Congressman? How differently fared VELLVERTON in the English Courts, and before the House of Lords. What a liberal country it is, to be sure, that admits avowed bigamists of the communion of BRIGHAM into its national halls of legislation, and the son of the prince of all bigamists into its national Academy of Arms.

The strike of the colored workmen still continues. The idle, sullen insurgents still swarm about the City Hall, like so many huge flies about a carcass. Some of their orators, I hear, make furious Black-Red Republican speeches—incendiary tirades against the rich and even against their friends in power. One declared, the other night, that he bitterly repented not having voted the Democratic ticket, and called out assenting cheers from the crowd. Perhaps, if they could bring about a change of administration in the Territory, they would find there is such a thing as "jumping out of the frying-pan into the fire." There were indications of a spirit like this among these people as far back as the Winter succeeding the Emancipation Proclamation. Then, I remember, a white-haired old plantation preacher and contraband rose in one of their meetings, and indignantly asked: "What are yer grumbling about? Yer all better off dan yer yer spected to be—dan yer deserve to be. Did yer tink when Mass LINKUM guv yo yer freedom he was gwine to feed yer on ice-cream?"

Some of these colored Communists declaim much against "Yankee meanness," and declare they were better off under their old Southern masters. It is a pity such malcontents had not another Moses, to lead them back into the fair land of bondage. As FREDERICK DOUGLASS once said: "An overseer, with a good whip, could take that notion out of them in about five minutes."

By the way, speaking of "Yankee meanness," I heard, the other day, a story of business "meanness" and hardness, here in Washington, which I never knew surpassed in New-England. A few weeks ago, an undertaker furnished a coffin for, I believe, the head of a poor family. A short time before he had been called upon to supply a similar sad need for a member of the same household, and had been duly paid; but on the second melancholy occasion, feeling some doubt as to the condition of the family exchequer, he demanded payment in advance of the funeral, and on the sum not being forthcoming, lifted the body from the coffin, laid it down somewhere, and bore off his property. Think of the coolness of the proceeding—of saying to a deceased citizen, "I'd thank you for that coffin!"—of serving an ejectment on a dead insolvent, resting under a mistaken impression that he had paid the last debt.

We all hear, with a grateful sense of happiness and relief, the good news from Mr. COLFAX, whose sudden and grave illness shocked us inexpressibly. Habitual cheerfulness and sunniness of temper, and cordial feela-day manners are such rare, pleasant, un-American characteristics that we cannot afford to lose them out of our social and political life,—especially as they are embodied in a man representing the best principles of the Republic, identified with much of its noblest history. So, we are glad for ourselves, as well as Mr. COLFAX, Mrs. COLFAX and the baby.

Everybody is pleased to hear that Mr. CORCORAN is able to ride out daily—is really getting well. I hear much of the beauty and comfort, even sumptuousness, of the asylum for old ladies in reduced circumstances which Mr. CORCORAN has built and endowed, calling it the "Louise Home," in memory of a beloved wife. To his this is a far grander monument than the tomb of CECILIA METELLA, that massive mausoleum of the Campagna, that for nearly two thousand years has ensilenced, through wars, sieges and falling Empires, the memory of a Roman wife. What a fine picture could be painted of these fortunate old ladies, enjoying every reasonable luxury, having every want anticipated with tender care,—in contrast with THACKERAY's picture of a London asylum for poor old women, to whom Queen CHARLOTTE left a special bequest for snuff. "A fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind."

I suppose Mr. CORCORAN'S beneficiaries are too refined to snuff, for a habit which was thought to be a sign of refinement in the last century is getting to be thought a little vulgar in this. But I hope, if there come here any dear old dames who still have a weakness for that old-fashioned comfort and sedative, it will be provided for—that jars of the choicest Rappee and the finest Maccaboy, delicately scented with attar of roses, will be kept in the store-room for them.

The Polaris sailed yesterday on a trial trip down the Potomac. On Saturday, or Monday, she is to sail for the Arctic regions, and beyond—for the realm of eternal snow, and other things eternal, perhaps. It seems to me it should have sailed as long ago as the first of April, when the wild geese fly north, and that its larder should have been plentifully stocked with March hares. There is much that is moving and magnificent about these Arctic enterprises—the pluck, the peril, the marvels, the mysteries, the coolness, the cost.

P. S.—In my last letter from Boston your cruel compositor made me speak of the "glare" instead of the glance of WHITTIER's deep-set eyes. G. O.

YALE VS. HARVARD.

A Review of the Aquatic Contests Between Yale and Harvard—History of the University Races.

The first contest between Harvard and Yale, for the boating championship, occurred nearly twenty years ago, and has been renewed nearly every year since that time. This year there will be no race, and as the correspondence between the two college nines has attracted considerable attention during the past few weeks, and has formed the theme for considerable discussion, a review of the different regattas may not be without interest at this time. For all our facts and statistics on the subject we are indebted to an as yet unpublished work, entitled Four Years at Yale, advance sheets of which have been kindly furnished us by the author.

The history of the aquatic contests between Yale and Harvard may be divided into two periods; the first embracing the irregular trials of the nine years, 1852-60; the second, the seven university races of the successive years, 1864-70. The initial contest took place on Lake Winnepiseogee, New-Hampshire, in August, 1852, and it is interesting to know that this contest would not have occurred had it not been for the fact that the hotel-keeper at the lake agreed "to pay all the expenses." Yale entered two boats, Harvard one. The race was a "two-mile straight-away pull," and the Harvard boat beat by two lengths. The next regatta was at Springfield, Mass., July, 1855; Yale entered two boats; Harvard entered one four-oared and one eight-oared boat, the latter being but 40 feet in length. Again did Harvard carry away the flags. In 1859 a race was to have occurred, and both crews were on hand, at Springfield, but while taking a "practice pull" the stroke of the Yale crew was knocked overboard and drowned, which accident, of course, broke up the race. In 1860 occurred the first "Union College regatta," at Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, Mass. Harvard entered two boats, Yale one, and Brown one. Harvard won in 13:13; Yale second in 20:18. The following day the same crews contended for prizes offered by the city. The contest was an exciting one, but Yale came in ahead in 19:14, four seconds better time than that made by the victorious boat the day before, and sixty-four seconds better than their own time. The time, 19:14, was the fastest ever made in America to that date, and has never been equaled by a six-oared crew, carrying an adult cockswain. In 1860, the Freshmen and Sophomores of each college also sent crews to Worcester. Harvard won the Freshman race in 19:40. In the Sophomore race the Yale boat gave up just after turning the stake-boat. In the University race Harvard came in first in 18:53, Yale second in 19:05, and Brown last in 21:18. This closes the "first period" of the aquatic contests.

In 1864 came the "first great University struggle." A Sophomore race also took place, which was won by Harvard in 19:06. The University race was won by Yale in 19:01; Harvard's time being 19:57. The next year (1865) Yale won the University race in the then unprecedented time of 17:42½; Harvard's time, 18:09. In the "citizen's regatta," the day following, Yale took the first prize ($300) in 19:05 against the 19:20 of the Harvard crew, its only contestant. It has been pretty well settled by affidavits, &c., published in Wilkes' Spirit of the Times, that Yale actually made the time stated, (17:42½,) though it has ever since been a disputed point between the two colleges, and led to many exciting and not always even-tempered discussions. In 1866 the Lawrence Scientifics, of Harvard, beat the Sheffield Scientifics, of Yale, 19:38 to 18:54. In the University race, Yale was defeated and has been every succeeding year. Harvard's time was 18:43; Yale's time, 19:10. In 1867 the Yale Freshmen beat those of Harvard, 19:32 to 20:03. In the University race Harvard won in 18:11; Yale's time, 19:26½. In 1868, the Yale Sophomores refused a challenge from Harvard, as did also the Freshmen, and so nothing occurred but the University race in which Harvard made 17:45½; Yale, 18:38½. In 1869, the Harvard Freshmen beat those of Yale, 19:08 to 19:35½. The time of the University race was: Harvard, 18:22; Yale, 18:11. In 1870, at Lake Saltonstall, the Yale Scientifics beat the Harvard Scientifics, 20:10 to 22:38½. In the University race, Yale came in ahead, 18:45; Harvard, 20:00; Harvard claimed a "foul" at the stake-boat, the referee refusing to hear Yale's counter-claim. Of a Sophomore boat by Harvard, awarded the race to the Harvard crew. The ladies of Worcester, it may be remarked, gave the laurel wreaths, which they had prepared for the victors, to the Yale crew. The result of the ill-feeling engendered by the contest in 1870, is that there will be no race this year, but doubtless the regular annual contests will be resumed next year and "may the best crew win." The following table shows at a glance the results of the contests since they were first inaugurated:

The Decline of Vicious Journalism.

Correspondence of the Cincinnati Gazette, June 3.

Speaking of FISK brings me, by a legitimate succession of ideas, to the failure of vicious journalism, as shown by the decline of the Sun. This I hold to be a matter of far more import to the public morals than any exhibition of the Tweed spoils. It would be an unhappy state if the deliberate prostitution of a public journal to the most vicious uses were a sure road to success.

DANA thought it would be, and he chose this road. No man ever had better opportunities to make a splendid success. He got the good will of a journal of large circulation. He had the advantage of being allowed to sell the Associated Press news at one-half the price charged by his partners. He had a new set of stockholders who put up the capital to furnish a splendid establishment, and he could have all the editorial force he wanted, and he had practically entire control.

And DANA at that time, although he made a failure as an editor at Chicago, and although the office which he performed under the name of Assistant Secretary of War was but equal to that of a man-of-all-work, could not but be a man of high tone who would secure, as he had, an enviable reputation to go upon. But there is a miserable, ignorant tradition in New-York journalism that the Herald made its early success by a vicious, unprincipled, indecent and blackmailing course. It is a lie; for there was never a time when the Herald did not have all the qualities to gain success honestly. There never was a time when it was not an enterprising, active and independent newspaper, with a reputation of always being in advance of its contemporaries in point of news. DANA believed this tradition, and determined to strike for a great success by giving to the dregs of viciousness. He deliberately went into the trade of conducting a public journal to procure success. Aware that this course would make him hated by respectable society, he resolved to compensate by making himself feared. For a time he seemed to succeed, but the success was no greater than the expenditure put upon the paper should have wrought with decency. But this was short lived, and the increase of circulation ceased. The daily rise in circulation was no more placed at the head of the editorial page, and a decline set in. And now DANA is cast by the respectable part of his old acquaintances, and is regarded as a social leper. With all its viciousness and its total lack of principle, his paper had no independence. It was apparent to all that it was run on personal interests and personal enmities. It was devoted alternately, month after month and year after year, to the personal spite of the editor against GRANT and GARNER and other persons, and to particular schemes and other causes, such as the Cuban, in a way that could only be explained by the idea of a peculiar personal inducement. It created the general impression of being a journal devoted to blackmailing and bribery. At length the exposure of the negotiations with FISK, and of the stopping of the press after about 10,000 papers had been struck off, to take out a savage article on GOULD and FISK on their gold conspiracy, entitled "The Welchers in Wall-street," revealed the custom of bribery and blackmailing so plainly that no one pretends to dispute it. It then became apparent to the stockholders that the Sun was run for the purpose of making money for others than those who furnished the capital. With this loss of character the decline of circulation has been constant, and it is the common belief that it is now considerably lower than when BEACH sold it. This is a forcible showing of the fact that vicious journalism, instead of promoting success, may prevent it when all the other elements of success abound. The example is good for mankind.

THE GRAND LODGE OF MASONS.

Final Adjournment of the Session—Proceedings Yesterday—Interesting Reports and Resolutions—Impressive Closing Scenes.

The Grand Lodge of Masons concluded its annual communication with the session yesterday morning. The Lodge was opened in ample form at 9 o'clock, and with prayer by R. W. and Rev. F. G. EWER, Grand Chaplain. Business was then proceeded with and rapidly dispatched, but as much of this was of importance only to the craft, a summary of that which is of general interest alone is given.

After opening a letter was read by M. W. Grand Master ARTHOR, which had been recently received by M. W. Brother JENKINSON, representative of the Grand Lodge of Ireland, near this jurisdiction, giving an account of Masonry in that country. Among other matters mentioned was, that a new Masonic Hall had recently been erected in Dublin at a cost of $60,000, and also that a new Lodge had just been instituted in the University of Dublin, which was working well, many of the Professors and students having already become members thereof.

W. SAMUEL JONES, from the Committee on Appeals, presented a report; but as the questions discussed—as was the case with the report presented the day previous by R. W. CORNELIUS BERGEN from the Committee on Grievances—related merely to lodge or personal matters, the details are unnecessary. The report occasioned some debate, but was finally adopted as presented.

R. W. E. L. JUDSON, from the Finance Committee, reported the usual appropriations for the various Boards of Relief of the State, and for salaries. Also, special appropriations for beneficiaries of the Grand Lodge, to the amount of $700. The report further recommended an appropriation of $1,500, as a salary for the Grand Lecturer, for services rendered during the past year. This provision called out considerable discussion, but was adopted with the other recommendations. In regard to a donation of $1,000 to the Washington Monument, a movement of this character, the Committee advised postponement for the present.

W. M. C. ADDOMS presented report of Committee on Work and Lectures, which, in alluding to the sectarian resolutions offered during the session, suggested that no change be made in the ritual. Adopted.

The following resolutions were offered, and disposed of as noted:

First—That only one copy of the annual transactions be henceforth furnished each lodge in the jurisdiction, all other copies to be sold at fifty cents each, the proceeds arising from such sale to be applied on the Hall and Asylum Fund.

Adopted.

Second—That the entire receipts for the Grand Lodge for the current year, after paying appropriations and expenses be donated to the same fund.

Adopted.

Third—For changing time of annual communication from June to October, reported favorably from Committee.

Rejected.

Fourth—Providing for a new officer of the Grand Lodge, to be known as "Musical Director," who should serve without salary.

Adopted.

The Grand Master subsequently appointed W. WILLIAM F. SHERWIN, Master of St. Cecilia Lodge of this City, as said officer.

R. W. JAS. W. HUSTED presented report from the Committee on the Hall and Asylum, in which the Trustees were complimented for the able and careful manner in which they had discharged their duties. In reference to the further prosecution of the work, the Committee advised a per capita tax rather than a mortgage on the real estate, and recommended the enactment of such laws as would accomplish the desired end. Report received.

W. Brother SRAMAN, from Committee on Constitution and Laws, reported in favor of the resolution increasing the yearly Grand Lodge dues from fifty cents to seventy-five cents, twenty five cents of which sum should be devoted to the Asylum Fund. The report occasioned debate, when Grand Master ARTHOR, passing the gavel to M. W. STEPHEN H. JOHNSON, addressed the Grand Lodge, making a stirring and eloquent appeal in aid of the great charitable enterprise in which the fraternity is now engaged. It was the first time, he said, that he had publicly called upon the craft for aid in the work, and he sincerely trusted it would never again become necessary that he should do so. A scene of much enthusiasm followed, the resolution was adopted unanimously, and voluntary offerings were immediately made to a large amount. Although the exact sum is not known, it is estimated that nearly $6,000 were added to the fund. Nearly all the Grand Officers donated their fees for attendance and traveling expenses, about $90 each, and many of the representatives followed the example thus set. W. Brothers THOMAS of Kansas, and W. HENRY D. WALKER, of Independent Royal Arch, both lodges of this City, on behalf of these bodies, donated $1,000 each, and several other Masters of lodges pledged themselves in sums of $100 and upward. W. ISAAC H. BROWN, Master of Puritan Lodge, individually donated $200. The result of the Grand Master's appeal was a most gratifying one.

When the enthusiasm had somewhat subsided, the Grand Master announced that the list of appointed Grand Officers, and that of District deputies for the ensuing year, would be made out and announced after the Grand Lodge had ceased its labors. Also the Committee of five, authorized by the resolution providing for a revision of the Constitution. Prayer was then offered by R. W. and Rev. R. L. SCHOONMAKER, and the Grand Lodge was adjourned sine die.

LET COMMON SENSE DECIDE.

What is the rational mode of procedure in cases of general debility and nervous prostration? Does not reason tell us that judicious stimulation is required. To resort to violent purgation in such a case is as absurd as it would be to bleed a starving man. Yet it is done every day. Yes, this stupid and unphilosophical practice is continued in the teeth of the great fact that physical weakness, with all the nervous disturbances that accompany it, is more certainly and rapidly relieved by HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS than by any other medicine at present known. It is true that general debility is often attended with torpidity or irregularity of the bowels, and that this symptom must not be overlooked. But while the discharge of the waste matter of the system is expedited or regulated, its vigor must be recruited. The BITTERS do both. They combine aperient and antibilious properties, with extraordinary tonic power. Even while removing obstructions from the bowels, they tone and invigorate those organs. Through the stomach, upon which the great vegetable specific acts directly, it gives a healthy and permanent impetus to every enfeebled function. Digestion is facilitated, the faltering circulation regulated, the blood reinforced with a new accession of the alimentary principle, the nerves braced, and all the dormant powers of the system roused into healthy action; not spasmodically, as would be the case if a mere stimulant were administered, but for a continuance. It is in this way that such extraordinary changes are wrought in the condition of the feeble, emaciated and nervous invalids by the use of this wonderful corrective, alterative and tonic. Let common sense decide between such a preparation and a prostrating cathartic supplemented by a poisonous astringent like strychnine or quinia.

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS.

The Liver is an organ of great importance, so far as a healthy condition and proper nutrition of the body are concerned. The fact is, that a large majority of all the diseases to which the human family is liable are caused by its derangement. Dyspepsia is consequent upon impaired digestion and imperfect nutrition. It is a well-known truth, that a disordered Liver will cause an almost infinite variety of disease, and create almost innumerable symptoms that discover to its protean form presents; hence the great importance of a healthy action of the Liver in order to keep the system free from disease. And, as a consequence, a good digestion, perfect nutrition, and a good old age are the results.

In past ages, for disordered Liver, mercury, in some of its forms, was regarded as the only remedy; but as this drug acts upon all the secretions alike, and being a mineral poison, its use would produce salivation and a breaking down of the vital powers.

A desideratum long desired, was to discover a remedy for disordered Liver that was as efficacious as mercury and free from any of its injurious results. After long and patient research in the vegetable kingdom, Schenck's Mandrake Pills were discovered, having for

HORRIBLE AFFAIR.

A Woman Mortally Wounded by Her Insane Husband.

One of the most shocking of the tragedies which have recently been so numerous, was perpetrated at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, in the premises No. 363 Seventh-avenue, where EDWARD WALLS had apartments with his wife, MARY WALLS, and three children. Since March last the husband had been out of employment, and seeing want approaching his dependents, had lately become subject to such profound mental depression that he was considered insane. About the hour mentioned, a cry of pain and terror was heard from the room on the second floor of the house occupied by the family, and some of the other inmates rushing in, found the unfortunate wife lying on a "shakedown" on the floor, with four stab-wounds in the abdomen. She had strength to say that while asleep she had been attacked by her husband, and he did not deny that he had inflicted the wounds. On the contrary, when he was asked why he had sought to take the life of his wife, he said that he had been told the previous evening that she intended to leave him, and he was determined that she should die.

A priest and physician being summoned the former suggested that a policeman should be sent for, when WALLS immediately left the room and went down stairs. At the street door he met Officer HUNT, of the Twentieth Precinct, to whom he said: "You are just the man I was looking for. I want to go to the Station-house." In answer to the question of the astonished policeman as to why he wanted to go to the Station-house, he said with the utmost sincerity, "I've stabbed my wife upstairs." The officer, taking the self-confessed homicide in custody, locked him up in the Twentieth Precinct Station-house, but during the morning he was taken before Justice Ode, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, and committed to the Third District Prison to await the result of the injuries. Meantime the wounded wife had been removed, in a supposed dying condition, to Bellevue Hospital, and the suddenly-bereaved children, of whom one is aged seven years, another three years, and the youngest but two months, were cared for by the sympathizing neighbors. The conviction of WALLS' insanity which has been prevalent among those who knew him has been strengthened by his crime, for he and his wife have always lived affectionately together, and, as he was not in liquor, could not be charged with the deed even if his sanity was conceded. The wounds were inflicted with a large three-bladed pocket-knife he has been in the habit of carrying, and, although he struck vital parts, he seems to have struck at random.

The New Bureau of Combustibles—Important Order in Relation to Fire-Works.

The change in the Fire Department, which has been decided upon by the Commissioners, will not take effect until the 18th inst., on which day Mr. CHARLES E. GILDERSLEVE will retire from the office of Secretary, and be succeeded by Mr. WM. B. WHITE. Meantime, Mr. GILDERSLEVE is busily engaged, in addition to the discharge of his duties as Secretary, in organizing the Bureau of Combustibles, to the supervision of which important department he has been appointed by the Fire Commissioners. In consideration of the near approach of the Fourth of July, and the greatly increased supply of fire-works on hand in the various stores, the Fire Commissioners have already taken action under the new law regulating the sale and keeping of fire-works, and have ordered that hereafter no fire-works shall be manufactured, stored, or kept upon sale in the City of New-York, except under a permit duly issued therefor by the Board of Fire Commissioners, under and in conformity with the following regulations:

"Persons or kindred works on sale in the City of New-York shall be required to make application therefor, subject to revocation by the Board, in case of violation of any of the regulations established by the Board governing the keeping of fire-works, in the place for which the permit is to be issued, and state at the time of application: 1. The name of applicant. 2. The location of the premises where the fire-works are to be kept. 3. The quantity and description of the fire-works intended to be kept for sale. They agree to prevent the making of the fire and burning of any fire in the place where such fire-works are kept, to protect all lights therein with glass covering, and to place a sign or placard in the place, conspicuously upon such premises, a sign or placard in the words, "Fire-works—No smoking allowed." Dealers shall not expose for sale in front or outside of said premises, or within two feet of the front line of said premises, any fire-works, gunpowder or dynamite, any fireworks containing powder or other explosive material, excepting fire-crackers or torpedoes. No fire-works, excepting fire-crackers or torpedoes, shall be sold to any person under 16 years of age, nor shall any be sold on any sidewalk, street, or other public place within said City. Fireworks, consisting of Chinese crackers, wafers, blue lights, candles, colored pots, lances, wheels, and other works of brilliant colors, may be kept upon sale intervening the 10th day of June and the 15th day of July in each year, provided the quantity kept upon sale in any one building shall not exceed 1,000 pounds, and the sum of $1,000 in value. During those portions of the year intervening the 20th day of July and the 10th day of June in the succeeding year, no fire-works shall be kept upon sale in any place in the City of New-York in quantity in any one building exceeding one sample package of each particular kind, or in such limited quantities as shall be specified under the permit issued. Wafers, rockets, Roman candles, double-headers, blue lights, flower pots, signal lights, bombshells, mines, or other works which shall be in quantities in excess of one dozen pieces of each kind, they must be stored in a room or apartment separate from the other merchandise or materials, and specially adapted for the purpose, and the building thereof, or part of, or constructed in such manner as shall be approved of by the Board. Fire-crackers, manufactured and kept upon sale, of the kinds of fireworks not hereinbefore designated, shall be put up in packages of not more than one pound each, and in such buildings as shall be approved of by the Board. The manufacture or sale of torpedoes or of fireworks, composed wholly or in part of nitro-glycerine, is prohibited."

The Mud Preparing for the Manure Men.

The Committee on Law and Ordinances of the Board of Health, of which Mr. GROSS, Mr. MANIERE and Mr. MULLALY are members, have held a meeting in relation to the flagrant violation of the orders of the Board in the continued dumping and carting of manure at the foot of Thirty-eighth-street, East River. Nothing, however, was done beyond fixing Tuesday next for the final consideration of the subject, and ordering that KANE & RYAN, the manure contractors, be notified of the fact. But notwithstanding the concession, the majority of the Committee were unequivocally of opinion that all the facts of the case are now fully understood, and that the dignity of the Board of Health, no less than the preservation of the public health, imperatively requires that immediate and summary measures be taken, the orders heretofore made requiring the manure to be dumped directly into boats, and such action will be recommended to the Board of Health at its next meeting. Mr. MANIERE remarked in the meeting of the Committee that the old Board of Health, after a four years' struggle with PECK & Co., the then contractors, had completely cleared the City of manure-heaps, but that when the present Board came in the contract was transferred to KANE & RYAN, because they were presumed to have political influence. He did not know that this was the case, but he did know that all action of the present Board intended to regulate the manure business had been nullified by the contractors, who had continued to dump on the ground notwithstanding the orders of the Board prohibiting it. In view of this fact Mr. MANIERE was of opinion that KANE & RYAN were entitled only to punishment for past misdeeds, and in this opinion he was sustained by a majority of the Committee.

Quarantine Executions—Shameful Extortion.

The ship J. W. Batterman arrived at this port on Saturday last, from Zaza, Cuba, with a cargo of sugar. The vessel was detained in the Lower Bay for examination, and, having a clean bill of health, should have immediately received a permit to come up and discharge. The Captain was approached on Monday by a tug in the employ of the Quarantine authorities, the Captain of which asked if the ship would want a tow. The Captain of the J. W. Batterman replied that he thought he would go up under sail as soon as he obtained a permit, and immediately went to the Quarantine station for the purpose of getting one. He was refused, and this ceremony was repeated on Tuesday and Wednesday with similar result. On Thursday morning the tug again came alongside, when the Captain of the Batterman decided to employ her. The Captain of the tug went off to the boarding station, saying as he departed, that if he succeeded in getting a permit he would give a signal with his whistle, which would enable the Batterman to get ready to go up. The course of the tug was watched, and it was observed that she had scarcely got alongside the boarding station when the whistle was blown. She returned immediately, the Batterman was taken in tow, brought to the City, and the $50 fee demanded paid. The usual charge for towing a vessel of this size from the lower quarantine is $15. The Captain of the J. W. Batterman and his consignees think it probable that had he not employed the tug at the exorbitant rate, he would have been refused a permit to come up to the City.

The Revolt on the Brig Bowen—The Charge of Murder Withdrawn.

Two of the colored sailors belonging to the brig J. L. Bowen, PETER ANDERSON and WM. H. JOHNSON, gave testimony for the Government before Commissioner DAVENPORT, yesterday, in regard to the mutiny on board of that vessel, which resulted in the killing of Capt. ARMSBURY, and the wounding of the two mates. Their evidence was substantially the same as given by the previous witnesses. The examination failed to show that any one saw THOMAS, one of the prisoners, strike the Captain, and the only foundation for the charge of murder was the admission of the accused himself. The Government did not regard this as good evidence, as his statement that he committed the act in self-defense would have to be accepted along with his other admissions. The prosecution consequently abandoned the charge of homicide, and asked for the commitment of the accused on the charge of attempting to create a revolt. MICHAEL AHEARN was then discharged, it not being shown that he joined in the attempt. The case was subsequently adjourned until Tuesday.

Removing the Obstructions at Hallet's Point—A Visit to the Government Works.

A number of gentlemen assembled yesterday afternoon, on board the United States engineering boat, for the purpose of surveying the Government works which are being established at Hallet's Point. Before starting, they proceeded to inspect the blasting-boat, or "scow," as it is called. This boat is at present moored over Oceanus Reef, where she will shortly commence blasting. She is massively built of oak, is 120 feet long and 36 feet broad. She is more like a floating raft than a ship. Amidships there is a well 30 feet in diameter and 22 feet in height, including the telescope on the top. This is surrounded and let down into the water, when necessary, by four steam cranes on to the rock, which is to be blasted. This well is not for the divers, but for the protection of the drilling instruments. The drills used are cross-pointed, and no waves or tide can obstruct the boring, by reason of the well. The various drill-irons are about ten feet in length, and they are screwed together as the boring-iron becomes shorter, and make a cavity four and a quarter inches in diameter, gradually diminishing to three and a quarter inches. These incisions can be made 120 feet below low water, and are then charged with nitro-glycerine. This raft of vessel is provided with six huge anchors, four weighing forty-three hundred-weight, and two fifty-five hundred-weight. The "scow" has lately removed some very extensive obstructions near Diamond Reef—in fact, the river at this point will be perfectly clear as soon as the debris is removed by the contractors. Gen. NEWTON will soon commence to remove the Battery Reef, which is a principal obstruction to all vessels drawing over twenty feet of water, and the Pilot Commissioners forbid pilots to pilot vessels out of the harbor at strange ebb and flow, in consequence. It takes about nine hours to drill eighteen holes deep enough for blasting, by the machinery of this boat. She was designed and built by Gen. NEWTON.

On arriving at Hallet's Point, the visitors were received by the Supt., Mr. G. C. RICHMONDS, who immediately transported the company to the depths below. These depths are about 50 feet below low water, and extend in eight different grotesque caverns 115 feet under the river. These caverns, which remind one of Fingal's Cave, are named after various American statesmen. They are supported by pillars which will be blasted simultaneously, the result of which will be that the river will be deepened about thirty feet. The caverns do not look like artificial work, for the sea-water which has crept in has produced an effect certainly more romantic and ancient than modern. The caverns are twenty feet in length and sixteen feet in width, and the pillars will be charged in twenty-two separate holes with two ounces of glycerine each. Before the explosion takes place the caverns will be flooded with water, so that the effect will be scarcely noticeable in the vicinity. Among those who accompanied Gov. NEWTON were Dr. W. W. Streb, Capt. Scott Burries, Snow, Thompson, G. W. Blunt, and Mr. Bryant Godwin.

Homicide on Shipboard—Sailors' Fight at Sea.

Two boatmen went to Capt. ULMAN, of the First Precinct, yesterday, and told him that a murder had been committed by CHARLES E. HAYWARD, seaman, on the ship Dexter, Capt. PRINCE H. TAYLOR, just arrived in this port. Roundsman MCGLOIN, taking two officers with him, went to the vessel and found that the Captain had gone away to get a warrant for the arrest of the murderer, leaving him aboard of the ship. Capt. ULMAN immediately arrested the man, and brought him and also four witnesses from among the most intelligent-looking of the crew before United States Commissioner SHIELDS. The name of the man killed by HAYWARD was JOHN MCGINN, and the killing was the terrible ending of a fight on May 18, which grew out of a quarrel about a box of matches. HAYWARD is a native of Madison, Ohio, and MCGINN of Prince Edward Island, N. S. One of the witnesses says that MCGINN, having lost his matches, asked all the sailors, and also HAYWARD, who said he knew nothing about them. MCGINN threatened to "lick" HAYWARD within twenty-four hours. He then got an iron belaying-pin and descended into the forecastle, where he backed HAYWARD up into a corner; HAYWARD said "Go away, I don't want to have anything to do with you," and drew a sheath-knife, which he put up when MCGINN told him to; MCGINN then raised the belaying-pin to strike HAYWARD on the head, but only hit his face and hands; HAYWARD then drew his sheath-knife and stabbed him; he died in twenty minutes.

The statement of HENRY D. PERRY, one of the witnesses, made to a TIMES reporter, is as follows:

I am a seaman on the ship Dexter, of Boston, Capt. P. H. TAYLOR, from Leghorn, for New-York; a quarrel took place between CHARLES E. HAYWARD and JOHN MCGINN, seamen, about a box of matches; MCGINN accused HAYWARD of stealing them, which HAYWARD denied; MCGINN then struck HAYWARD, and HAYWARD drew a sheath-knife; when MCGINN saw HAYWARD draw his knife, he went into the forecastle and got an iron belaying-pin and struck HAYWARD with it about the body, and then HAYWARD drove the knife into his body; he expired twenty minutes after he was cut; the affray took place in latitude 42 degrees, about twenty days and from this port.

MCGINN has a mother and four sisters residing in Boston, and was well liked by the crew. He was formerly in the United States Navy. HAYWARD also has always been a quiet man and good mess-mate, and has been a soldier in the Union Army.

Hayward and Patrick O'Brien, Seth G. Snow, Francisco La Costo and John Perry, the four witnesses, were sent to Ludlow-street Jail, to be brought before Commissioner SHIELDS for examination at 2 o'clock. The Captain of the ship who is said to be also one of the firm of TAYLOR & BROTHERS, of Boston, the owners of the vessel, not making his appearance before the Commissioner, that officer decided not to make any examination yesterday.

Warlike Russian Visitors—A Cruise Around the World.

The corvette Vesduik, of the Imperial Russian Navy, arrived in the Lower Bay Thursday afternoon and exchanged salutes with the forts. The Vesduik is an armored corvette, carrying twelve guns, 140 men and sixteen officers, commanded by Capt. M. MICHALOFF. She has been out from Russia since 1868, and has made the voyage around the world, principally for the instruction of a number of young officers, who are about completing their first cruise. The Vesduik is just from the Indian Ocean, and came to New-York expecting to meet the fleet of His Imperial Highness the Grand Duke ALEXIS.

The corvette will anchor at the man-of-war's anchorage, off the Battery, some time today. Several of the officers, including Capt. MICHALOW, were in the City yesterday, and drove to Central Park, which appeared to excite much admiration among them. The Russian visitors remain in the harbor about three weeks, previous to their departure for Cronstadt.

A Swindler Convicted.

At the Court of General Sessions yesterday, before Recorder HACKETT, the trial of EDWARD MORRIS, indicted for forging and selling Erie Railway tickets to carry persons to the Mace-Coburn prize-fight, was watched with considerable interest by a large number of the sporting fraternity. ALEXANDER J. LENOX, a detective connected with the railway, said that he arrested the accused, in whose possession he found a bundle of tickets for Buffalo, Boston, St. Louis and other places. MORRIS told him that he had stolen them at the New-England Hotel, and took him to No. 49 Greene-street, where another bundle of forged tickets was found secreted behind a picture hanging on the wall. JOHN N. AMMORT, Assistant Passenger Agent of the Erie Railway Company, pronounced the tickets forgeries. MORRIS was convicted and was remanded, to give the District-Attorney an opportunity of showing that the prisoner had swindled the Erie Railway out of nearly $50,000.

A Wrecking to Gudgeons—Ingenious Attempt to Defraud.

Yesterday Marshal HART received from Mrs. S. B. SHAW, a milliner, residing at Omaha, Nebraska, a letter addressed to that lady by HUNTINGTON & BROTHER, of the Broadway Hotel, No. 289 Broadway, in which these gentlemen state that a very sad event recently occurred in their establishment, being the sudden death of an aged and highly-respectable lady, who had been stopping with them since the 20th of May last. The letter goes on to say that this lady had with her two large traveling trunks full of rich dresses, imported laces and fine under-clothing; also a gold watch and chain, $500 worth of jewelry, some legal papers, "apparently deeds," says the ingenious letter-writer; also an unfinished letter, addressed to Mrs. S. B. SHAW, milliner, Omaha, Nebraska, from which Messrs. HUNTINGTON & BRO. were led to infer that the person they addressed was a friend or relative of the deceased. The letter concludes by stating that the deceased owed a small hotel bill of $10 80, and that if Mrs. SHAW would send that amount to HUNTINGTON & BRO., they would forward the two large trunks, full of clothing, belonging to deceased. Mrs. SHAW, instead of complying with this request, very wisely sent the letter to Marshal HART, with an indorsement that she believed the writers of it to be swindlers. That she was perfectly correct in her surmise was proved by Capt. THORNE, who, after a patient investigation, was unable to find any such hotel as that named in the letter, or any such persons as HUNTINGTON & BRO. There is very little doubt that the letter is only one of many sent out by these parties, "the same with intent to deceive."

Another Complaint Against Gillespie.

ISAAC WATSON, of No. 58 Spring-street, who was one of the parties to the affray on Sunday last, in which Officer LEROY, of the Ninth Precinct, was wounded, appeared yesterday before Justice HOGAN, at the Tombs Police Court, as complainant against JOHN GILLESPIE, the patrolman of the Twenty-eighth Precinct, who shot LEROY while the latter was attempting to arrest him for a flagrant breach of the peace. Mr. WATSON repeated in his affidavit the facts familiar to the public, and stated that GILLESPIE had beaten him with his fist, had knocked him down, whereby his shoulder had been dislocated, and had struck him with a piece of railing of the stoop of the store.

Some German Philosophy.

The Frei Denker is a German monthly magazine published in this City, of which the fourth number has just appeared, which contains an article arguing that man has no free will of his own; also an article on the mission of the Germans in this country, taking the ground that the introduction of the German school system throughout the country, and the establishment of a German university, ought to be the principal object of Germanism in this country as a means of extending its influence.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The Exchange was deserted yesterday, (June 9,) after the extensive transactions of the past two days, and no business of importance was carried on. JAMES M. MILLER effected the only sale of the day, disposing of a small tract of land, containing about one-half acre, located at Great Neck, Long Island; sold for $75. No description was given of the property, and the sale was made by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of D. P. INGRAHAM, Jr., Esq., referee. JOSEPH MCGUIRE adjourned the legal sales, advertised to take place, of house and lot on Fortieth-street, near Ninth-avenue, and of property on Centre-street, until today. No further business was transacted.

Today, at the Exchange, JOSEPH MCGUIRE will dispose of the real estate above alluded to, and also conduct another legal sale of a house and lot on Thirty-fourth-street, near First-avenue. In the matter of suburban auctions, JOHNSON & MILLER will offer for sale fifteen plots of ground, each containing about one-half acre, located at Fair View Park, Staten Island. The proposed sale is rather a private one, tickets being only issued to parties desiring to purchase. The property is considered choice, and is owned by Mr. SAMUEL MARSH, Jr. The sale takes place on the premises at 4 o'clock.

The auction at Fordham, Westchester County, held on Thursday by A. J. BLESCKER, SON & CO., was numerously attended, and about 300, or half the number of lots offered, were disposed of. The prices realized were fair, and the result of the transaction a satisfactory one. The particulars are given below in the recapitulation appended.

The suburban sale of lots at West Bergen, Jersey City, N. J., conducted also on Thursday by LEWIS E. WOOD, was also moderately well attended, but the result achieved was not wholly such as was desired. Of the sixty lots offered, twenty were sold, when it was concluded by the owners of the property to withdraw the balance of the lots, the prices obtained being below the estimated value. Details below.

On Monday of next week an important sale of up-town City lots will be held, at the Exchange, by V. K. STEVENSON & CO., B. P. FAIRCHILD, auctioneer, for particulars in regard to which reference is made to our advertising columns. Several other sales will also take place during the week, at the Exchange and elsewhere, full notices of which in detail will appear as usual in this column on Monday.

HOLMES & WHITE, of Tarrytown, report having recently sold at private sale the following property, located in that village: Plot or ground, with water front and grant, lying between Wilder and Main streets, west of the Hudson River Railway, containing about fifty city lots, water front 300 feet; sold for $23,500. The property was purchased by COE & BUCHANAN, for manufacturing purposes, through the above-named firm, from THOMAS H. PURDY.

Lively Races Yesterday, and More Today.

PROSPECT PARK YESTERDAY.

Last Day of the June Meeting—The Double-Team Race Won by Honest Allen and George Wilkes, and the 2:31 Purse by Royal John.

Yesterday was the most charming of the four days of the meeting at Prospect Park. The racing was not, perhaps, quite so exciting as on some of the previous days, but the air was so clear, cool and invigorating, and the drive to the course was such a pleasure, that the day proved an enjoyable one to all. The meeting has been the most successful one ever held upon the course. The entries were so full that but little money had to be put into the purses, the attendance each day has been unprecedentedly large, and it is within bounds to say that the Fair Grounds Association are ahead $15,000. Yesterday there was a falling off in the number of spectators, most of the New-Yorkers who generally go across the river to attend the meetings on this favorite Brooklyn course, holding off for Jerome Park today. Over 5,000 persons, however, were present to enjoy the day's sport, and all appeared well satisfied.

THE RACING.

The first event was a race between double teams for a purse of $2,000. The entries were JOHN LOVETT'S blk. s. Monitor and blk. g. Black Harry; W. L. SIMMON'S ch. s. Honest Allen and b. s. George Wilkes, and H. S. RUSSELL'S blk. g. Darkness and blk. m. Jessie Wales. Darkness and Jessie Wales were the favorites in the pools, although Honest Allen and George Wilkes had many supporters and admirers. The betting ranged as follows before the start:

Jessie Wales and Darkness	$200	$175	$150	$125
Honest Allen and George Wilkes	175	150	125	110
Black Harry and Monitor	75	65	55	50

FIRST HEAT.—The teams did not get off in good shape till the fourth attempt. The stallions had a trifle the advantage in the send-off, and improved it sufficiently to win the heat by two lengths. Monitor and Harry were second, and the Boston team last. Harry, Wilkes and Darkness all behaved badly in this heat, getting over a good deal of ground on a run. Time—2:31½.

SECOND HEAT.—When the horses were called out for the second heat, Harry was found to be so lame that he was drawn. This reduced the race to a contest between the stallions and the Boston team. The former sold in the pools at 3 to 1 against the latter. The horses had a good start and went off at a slashing pace, the Allen team the stallions drew in front and led two lengths at the quarter, the same at the half, and won the heat by three lengths in 2:30.

THIRD HEAT.—The stallions were now the favorites at any odds, and justified the expectations of their backers by taking the lead and winning the heat by two lengths in 2:28. The Boston team crossed the score on a dead run. The following is the summary:

PROSPECT PARK, Friday, June 9, 1871.—Purse $2,000, for double teams; $1,200 to first, $600 to second, and $200 to third.

W. L. Simmon's s. g. Honest Allen, and br. s. Geo. Wilkes 1 1 1

Third heat	:36½	1:13½	2:28

SECOND RACE.

This, the final event of the meeting, was for a purse of $1,700, for horses that had never beaten 2:31; $1,400 to first, $200 to second, and $200 to third. Sixteen horses were entered in this race; only twelve however came up for the word. These were Royal John, Charley Green, Harry D., Russell's Bell of Toronto, Rose Goldblust, Lady Wells, Lydia Thompson, Climax, J. H. Coleman, Dew Drop, and Topsey. Lady Wells was the favorite at one to two against the field. The first heat was won by Royal John by half a length, Charley Green was second, and Lady Wells third. In the second heat the breed was not cut off till they came up for the word the ninth time, and then they were strung out so much that there was a difference of nine seconds between the first and last horse. This heat was won by Charley Green, Royal John being the twelfth horse in. Royal John was in the rear at the start in the third heat, but came in ahead at the wind. In this heat Topsey was distanced. The fourth heat was also won by Royal John, by two lengths, after an extremely bad start. Charley Green won second money, and Harry D. third. The following is the summary:

GAME DAY—Purse $1,700, for horses that had never beaten 2:31; $1,000 to first, $500 to second and $200 to third.

JEROME PARK TODAY.

Pool-Selling on the Races Last Night—The Starters in the Different Races and the Betting on the Favorites.

The first of the great running meetings of the season will be inaugurated today at Jerome Park, under the auspices of the American Jockey Club. The racing promises to be the most brilliant in the history of the American turf, and the excitement has increased from day to day until the interest in the meeting includes all classes of the community. The arrival of several Southern and Western horses of great repute to compete with the Northern-bred racers for the honors of the turf has mainly brought about this result, and thousands of dollars will change hands on the result of each event. The betting on the Belmont Stakes is very heavy, and the winnings and losses will no doubt amount to more than a half million of dollars. The excitement was at fever heat last night in the pool-rooms and UNDERWOOD & McGOWDAN and MARSHALL & JOHNSON found plenty of customers anxious to make deposits in the pool-box until a late hour. The first great event today will be the Fordham Stakes, in which there will probably be thirteen starters, as follows: Chillicothe, Finesse, Nellie James, Niagara, Tuscania, My Maryland, General Von Moltke, Leland, Climax, Echo, Frogtown, Calogram and Zarette. Niagara and Climax carry the topweights; the first 109 pounds and the second 116 pounds. Chillicothe, with 105 pounds up, is a great favorite, while Finesse is thought well of at the same weight, and Leland is a favorite with 103 pounds up.

The second race is the great Belmont Stakes, in which it now seems probable that the following ten racers will start: D. MCDANIELS' ch. c. Harry Bassett, by Lexington; M. H. SANFORD'S b. c. Monarchist, by Lexington; A. BELMONT'S ch. c. By the Sea, by Thormanby; MILES KELLEY'S gr. f. Nelly Gray, by Commodore; T. W. DOSWELL'S b. c. Kolue, by Leamington; M. A. LITTELL'S gr. f. Mary Clark, by Lexington; A. K. RICHARDS' b. c. Tuloman, by War Dance; D. SWIGERT'S ch. c. Stockwood, by Asteroid; J. A. GRINSTEAD'S ch. c. Alroy, by Australian and Edwin, John Morgan and the Breckinridge colt. Although the Fordham Stakes is spoken of as the first race, the opening event will probably be a steeple-chase of about three miles, over a fair hunting country. The starters will be Oysterman, Jr., Mitchell, Tammany, General Tweed and Athlone. The first-named, the favorite, will carry 158 pounds, Mitchell 155, Tammany and Tweed each 145, and Athlone 154. The day's sport will close with a two-mile dash between Hamburg, Judge Durell, Midday, Regardo, Sir Rufus, Victory, BUFORD'S Lexington filly, and Defender. In the pools, sold last night on the events of today, the betting was as follows:

BELMONT STAKES.

Ball—Mutual vs. Oakleaf, of New-Durham, N. J.

Yesterday the Mutuals and Oakleafs, of New-Durham, N. J., did a good deal of baseball playing at the Union Grounds, with how much good to themselves we fail to conceive, as neither club played a game at all worthy the efforts of a corner-lot nine. We therefore simply append the score by innings:

Mutual	11	2	3	0	4	11	4	0	2	—35
Oakleaf	0	0	1	1	0	1	0	1	1	—7

Today the Stars and Athletics, of Brooklyn, play their first game of the season on the Capitoline Grounds.

WEST POINT.

Conclusion of the Examination of the Graduating Class—Brilliant Exercises by the Cadets—Important Business Under Consideration by the President and Military Authorities.

From Our Special Correspondent.

WEST POINT, Friday, June 9, 1871.

The examination of graduates for admission to the military profession has practically drawn to a close, and little remains save the performance of some routine exercises which can have no real weight on the final issue. In fact, the result was determined yesterday, and the further displays were created with a view to do honor to the President by imparting additional eclat to the proceedings. This was very well known throughout the Academy, and yesterday's examination excited no interest. Besides the Professors and Examiners a half-dozen spectators represented the general public. The members of the class were separately questioned on military discipline and the general disposition of an army in line of battle, and, without exception, the most intricate posers put by the Examiners were answered promptly, clearly and with an evident knowledge of the subject. Of the forty-one graduates who aspire to Academic honors, none have failed in any department included in the regular military training, and, though the result has not been announced, their positive success is assured.

RATHER DULL.

The morning exercises terminated at 10 o'clock, and the remainder of the day was spent in doing literally nothing. The President, Mrs. GRANT, Miss NELLIE GRANT, U. S. GRANT, Jr., Secretary BELKNAP, and the host of minor stars who flit through the promenades of West Point, were out for a drive, and the remainder of the day idly lounged about the piazza in front of the hotel. The weather was as pleasant as could be desired, and the President was permitted to enjoy that repose which, during the previous days, was denied to him. The cadet ball is yet too far off to be generally discussed, and the tameness is trying.

WHY THE PRESIDENT STAYS.

The President, as has already been stated in the TIMES, does not remain here for the sole purpose of awaiting the arrival of Gen. SHERMAN, but to attend an important committee meeting to be held at the Academy. It was understood to have opened this morning, and includes, beside the President and Secretary of War, some of the most prominent officers in the army, the officials here at West Point and some well-known members of the Senate. What the purport of it will be has not yet transpired, but the result will, it is supposed, settle some angry questions that have presented themselves here. I do not write from authority, but only give the opinions of several who pretend to be well-informed on the subject.

NIGHT DISPLAY.

The mortar exercises last evening vied with the splendid battalion drill which was so highly praised yesterday. It lasted from 9 until 10 o'clock. The President himself, through the Secretary of War, expressed his complete satisfaction with the skill of the cadets. The whole wound up with a brilliant display of fire-works.

ARTILLERY DRILL.

This afternoon an artillery drill was held, and the excitement which it inspired completely restored the drooping spirits of the visitors. The President himself seemed to catch the spirit of the occasion, and, leaving his seat, he advanced right to the front of the ground, where he remained until the end of the exercises. At the conclusion they passed before him, saluting him, the band meanwhile playing "Hail Columbia." The President complimented them on their display, and retired.

A HOP.

To-night Mr. THEODORE COZZENS, of the West Point Hotel, gave a grand hop in honor of the graduates, which was attended by all the dignitaries stopping at the Point, both civil and military.

Festival at the Cottage-Place Industrial School.

The school on the corner of Bleecker-street and Cottage-place was among the first of the kind founded by the Children's Aid Society. For many years its influence has been extensively felt among the poor families of the Eighth and Ninth Wards. Through the generous aid extended to it by a number of benevolent ladies, its teachers have been enabled to donate articles of clothing to the most needy of their scholars, and thus many that otherwise would not have been able to attend any school have acquired the elements of an education, and some of them are now filling places of responsibility and trust. Yesterday the annual May Queen festival was held at the school-rooms. A handsome bower stood in the centre of the room, and flowers in every form were profusely scattered throughout the hall. The exercises consisted of a speech of welcome by one of the pupils; songs, recitations and the crowning of the Queen. The entire programme reflected great credit upon the teachers and scholars. The festival was presided over by Mr. J. MACY, and short addresses were made by several gentlemen.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

A binocular glass was presented to Capt. ALLEN JOSEPH GRIFFIN, of the ship Cornelius Grinnell, yesterday, by Collector MURPHY, on behalf of the British Government, for saving the lives of the crew of the British ship Como, of London. The glass was forwarded through Sir EDWARD THORNTON to Hon. HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State, and by him sent to Collector MURPHY.

The crew of the ship Resolute, which hauled in the stream Thursday for Liverpool, tried to escape from the ship and duty with their advanced wages. An effort being made to prevent them, they became refactory, but being met resolutely by the officers were soon quieted.
